Canola — A New Cash Crop Alternative

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

THOMASVILLE (York Co.) — Neatly groomed fields blooming brilliant yellow during early May had rural Thomasville-area residents buzzing with curiosity. All sorts of speculation surfaced as to why dairy farmers Ted and Diane Haberland were letting their fields go to an incredibly lush growth of mustard weed.

Even the minister from their local church got in on the neighborhood mystery, announcing to the congregation one Sunday morning that the puzzling crop on the Haberland's New Wedlitz farm was canola.

While the Haberland's may not be the first to grow the oil seed in southcentral Pennsylvania, their acreage may be the first in York County. A brassica, related to turnips, canola is a relative newcomer to eastern United States but a long-time staple crop of European agriculture. More commonly known there as rapeseed, the grain provided a high-quality oil which served as Europe's petroleum source during World War II.

Ted Haberland, Jr., and his wife Diane are agronomy graduates of Delaware Valley College. They have a high level of interest in economical and practical alternatives for their dairy-feed-oriented crop program. So, they were receptive when Paul Nell of Andgrow Fertilizers in East Berlin suggested canola as a fall-planted cash crop.

The crop was not completely unknown to Haberland. His father, Ted Haberland, Sr., is a native of East Germany, and grew the oilseed as a young German farmer. Haberland Sr. was drafted for war

Susquehanna River Commission Proposes Water Use Fees For Farming Operations

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)—To help defray a portion of the costs associated with processing project review applications and monitoring compliance with commission regulations, the Susquehanna River Basin Commission has proposed a permit fee according to usage from $750 to $12,000. In addition, an annual fee from $100 to $1,500 is also part of the proposal.

According to the list in the April 10, 1991 Federal Register, the proposed fee schedule covers diversions of water, surface water withdrawals, hydroelectric projects, stream encroachments, consumptive uses as defined and regulated by the commission, ground water withdrawals and projects determined by the commission to be subject to its review and approval. Consumptive water use fees start at 20,000 gpd.

GRAIN AND SOYBEAN PRICES MIXED. WHEAT STEADY TO 2 CENTS HIGHER; CORN 1 TO 2 CENTS LOWER; SORGHUM STEADY TO 3 CENTS LOWER; SOYBEANS 1 TO 2 CENTS HIGHER. WHEAT PRICES HIGHER DUE TO RAIN DELAYED HARVEST IN SOME PLACES. BRAZIL IS REPORTED TO HAVE BOUGHT 131,000 TONNES HARD RED SPRING WHEAT UNDER EXPORT BONUS PROGRAM, BOOSTING PRICES. DECLINING QUALITY AND INCREASED REPORTS OF SCABS, FUNGI AND RUST IN HARD RED WINTER WHEAT IN MIDWEST AND DELTA, ADDED SUPPORT TO PRICES. CORN PRICES MOSTLY LOWER DUE TO VERY LITTLE EXPORT ACTIVITY. SOYBEAN PRICES ADVANCED DUE PARTLY TO BRAZIL'S RIO GRANDE PORT STRIKE, IN IT'S 5TH DAY, TURNING SOME BUYERS TO U.S. FOR BEANS. THE SOVIET CREDIT DEAL, ALTHOUGH OVER WORKED, IS BACK ON FRONT BURNER AND ADDING SOME SUPPORT TO BEAN PRICES.

EXPORT NEWS: SOUTH KOREA BOUGHT 42,000 TONNES U.S. WHEAT FOR JULY/AUGUST SHIPMENT. BRAZIL BOUGHT 131,000 METRIC TONS HARD RED SPRING WHEAT FOR 91/92 MARKETING YEAR.

OPINION

Approach Manure Pits With Caution

Underground storage pits are convenient, efficient and an increasingly popular way to store large amounts of manure, but they must be handled with care, according to a Penn State College of Agriculture farm safety expert. The danger peaks when stored manure is being agitated or emptied. Dr. Dennis Murphy, professor of agricultural engineering at Penn State says the fermentation process inside a manure storage pit also produces methane, hydrogen sulfide, carbon dioxide and ammonia. When these hazardous gases build up, the atmosphere inside the pit can become toxic, low in oxygen and even explosive.

If someone collapses in a pit, amateur rescue efforts often result in more fatalities. Several tragedies involving multiple deaths in a manure pit have occurred nationwide. In one incident, five family members died.

Gas concentrations are so high that it's literally suicide for anyone else to enter without protection. The only safe way to rescue someone who has collapsed in a pit is to ventilate the pit and wait for rescue personnel with the proper equipment.

Taking precautions can help to minimize manure storage hazards. Don't fill the pit to full capacity. Allow a foot or two of air space to accommodate concentrations of these gases. When agitating stored manure or emptying the pit, keep out of storage buildings and provide strong, constant ventilation.

Don't go into the pit unless you absolutely have to, Murphy advises. The only safe way to enter is to wear a self-contained breathing apparatus, along with a safety liner attached to a hoist with a person standing by to assist you in an emergency. Provide ventilation and keep in constant visual contact with someone who can pull you to safety using the hoist.

Summer's hot temperatures can increase gas buildup, but a manure pit is always potentially dangerous. Toxic gas concentrations can occur at any time of the year.

Hydrogen sulfide, the most hazardous manure pit gas, is colorless, heavier than air and smells like rotten eggs. At low concentrations, it paralyzes the sense of smell and causes dizziness, headaches, nausea and irritation of the respiratory tract. At high concentrations it can cause unconsciousness and respiratory failure within seconds and death within minutes.

Low concentrations of carbon dioxide can cause labored breathing and headaches. High concentrations can asphyxiate people and animals by displacing oxygen in the air. But unless all ventilation into and around the pit stops for a few hours, carbon dioxide usually does not build up to a lethal level, according to Murphy.

Ammonia can severely damage the eyes, nose, throat and lungs when it combines with moisture in those tissues to form a caustic alkaline substance. High concentrations can be fatal, but ammonia's irritating nature usually prompts people to leave the area quickly.

Methane is highly flammable and explosive, but it is impossible to detect without special equipment. Because it is lighter than air, methane rises out of manure pits, but it can collect under hoods, roof ridges and corners, where torches, cigarettes or sparks from electrical shorts can ignite explosions. Approach manure pits with caution

NOW IS THE TIME

To Practice Preventative Maintenance

Preventative maintenance is a very important part of any business, including farming. Every piece of equipment, machinery and vehicle should have a preventative maintenance program.

Preventative maintenance is seeing routine maintenance is formed to prevent unnecessary breakdowns and extensive repairs. Someone should have the responsibility of seeing the preventative maintenance program is being followed.

Such simple items such as changing filters, greasing equipment, sharpening knives, changing oil, and tightening belts and chains will lengthen the life of equipment.

At today's cost of equipment, every farmer needs to extend the life of all equipment. The new status symbol in agriculture should be who has obtained the longest use of equipment, not who replaces equipment first.

To Make Your Dollars Work

The current "economic slowdown" is causing financial stress for many businesses. Smart business managers anticipate hard times and position their companies so they will survive.

This means making hard decisions. Analyzing all costs, eliminating unprofitable units, and delaying purchase of new equipment are a few techniques used. Farmers need to practice these same business techniques.

Before spending a dollar, the farmer should ask how much money will it generate. If it will not generate more than a $1.10, then the expenditure should be seriously question. Many extra features offered on equipment maybe pretty and expensive but do not generate any additional income.

So, with reduced income from lower prices and dry weather, now is the time to control costs and make sure every dollar spent brings in additional income.

To Have Family Picnics

When was the last time your family had a picnic together?

Picnics are a fun activity for the whole family. We are fortunate to have many county and state parks nearby that offer excellent picnic facilities.

If you cannot get away from home, your own backyard or "the back 40 acres" also offer excellent picnic sites. Build a charcoal fire, grill your favorite meat and vegetables, and roast a few marshmallows.

Take a few minutes to reflect on life, enjoy the view and have fun with your family. Picnics are simple to plan and add a new twist to summer activities.

Farm Forum

Editor,

A very important bill in our Pennsylvania legislature, House Bill Number 1344, needs the support of all FFA and 4-H supporters across the state.

The Cole-Hayes bill creates a grant program for qualifying agricultural and rural youth organizations, with absolutely no taxpayer dollars being used. The monies were transferred from the Farmers Home Administration in 1982. They were used by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture for two programs, the farmers market loan program and a new technology loan program, both of which experienced limited success.

The PDA has the choice of using the money for a number of purposes, including agricultural youth programs, but to date have not done so. Legislation is necessary because:

1. Both the previous and present Administrations have chosen not to direct support for agricultural rural youth.

Examples:

Agriculture Fair Appropriation was vetoed from the budget in 1988.

Funding for the FFA was elimated in the last two proposed budgets.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

ON HEARING THE TRUMPETS

June 9, 1991

Background Scripture: Ezra 3; Hagai 1:1-2:8.

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 57:14-21.

My first full-time church after graduating from seminary was very nearly my last church. I was sent to what my District Superintendent would later term "a problem church." The problem was that an old country church near Harrisburg, PA, found itself in the midst of an area that was rapidly becoming suburban. As the lay leader of the church stated it shortly after I arrived, "This was a nice family church and that's the way we want to keep it."

Of course, "family" to her meant essentially her family and she and others fairly bristled when newcomers tried to become part of our church family. The tension became even worse as we neared the completion of a bright, new church edifice. For many years, the people of this rural community had worshipped in "the little white church on the corner." It was obvious that eventually "the little white church" would have to come down. It had served well for many years, but there was no place for it in the church's future.

RESISTING CHANGE

If I had been older and wiser — as I surely am now! — and not so young and idealistic, I could probably have brought all that off without nearly so much pain and hostility. Perhaps I could have made the transition less difficult for them — and myself. But, as we Pennsylvania Dutch say, "Ve get too soon oldt, und too late schmardt!" (It loses something in translation, I'll admit.)

I am probably now the same age that my lay leader was back in that first pastorate. (Actually, she was probably a bit younger than I am now.) I can better appreciate how she and her family felt. It is human nature to resist change and the older we get the more painful change seems to be. So, too many of us spend too much time lamenting what is no more or what is passing all too swiftly.

Actually both of us were "right," to use a term that is clearly inadequate. In any given situation we must value both the past and the future and govern our present accordingly. It is typical of youth to want to forge ahead to the new, just as it is understandable for aged to lament the passing of the old. It is allright for us to shed some tears over the past that we are losing, but we must never let our tears drown out the trumpets!

TEARS AND TRUMPETS

That's what happened in Ezra 3 when the returned exiles laid the foundation for the rebuilding of the temple: "And all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised the Lord, because the foundation of the house of the Lord was laid. But many of the priests and Levites... old men who had seen the first house (the temple of Solomon), wept with a loud voice... though many shouted for joy; so that the people could not distinguish the sound of the joyful shout from the sound of the people's weeping..." (3:11b,12).

I like the way it is put in I Esdras 5:65 (don't bother looking for it — it's in the Apocrypha): "...the people could not hear the trumpets because of the weeping of the people." Change may cause us tears, but we ought never to allow our tears to drown out God's trumpets.

Why sacrifice working capital to buy farm equipment. . .

Leasing lets you have both!

You can move right into new equipment without investing your working capital. That's because there's no down payment, stock purchase, or other up front charges. You are free to use your capital for other purposes that generate more profits for your operation.

Your options are open. Make payments monthly, quarterly, semi-annually, or annually, whichever fits your cash flow pattern the best. And you know exactly what your equipment costs will be since payments are fixed throughout the lease term. You can renew the lease for an additional term, purchase the equipment at the end of the lease, or simply return it. And there's more! Give us a call and we'll tell you about the tax benefits, how leasing improves your cash flow and makes better use of existing credit lines.

Viking Ship® Calcium Nitrate: vegetable nutrition the way you want it

Viking Ship Calcium Nitrate fertilizer 15.5-0-0 has been earning vegetable grower loyalty for more than forty years. In the field! Under weather conditions that often fail to cooperate! At harvest, when talk time is over and product promises are measured by results! Growers have found that Calcium Nitrate comes through.

Use Calcium Nitrate on your next crop. You will be pleased by the growth, yield and quality you see. The kind of profitable results achieved by vegetable

Nitrate Nitrogen • Fast Response
Early Maturity • Non-Acid
Available Calcium • Precise Timing
Controlled Growth • Water Soluble

growers across America, season after season, because of Calcium Nitrate's unique combination of nutrients:

Nitrate nitrogen for fast response. Better timing and control. Calcium Nitrate supplies nitrate, the non-acidifying nitrogen that's readily available for plant uptake. You'll see fast, uniform response with the precise feeding and timing you need for better growth and better crop management.

Earlier, more uniform maturity. Improved yield and quality. Nitrate nitrogen gives the quick optimum response the crop needs and then "runs out." Elimination of residual nitrogen and salt problems promotes better yields, uniform maturity and harvest efficiency. One good thing leads to another when you fertilize with Calcium Nitrate.

Vital calcium: it helps your crop; helps your soil. Calcium Nitrate contains 19% water-soluble calcium. This vital nutrient, combined with nitrate nitrogen, provides crop benefits both above and below the ground. Young leaves, stalks, roots and fruit must have calcium for proper development. Adequate calcium in the fruit markedly improves harvest and shipping quality. This low-salt, non-acid source of nitrate and calcium is unmatched by any other nitrate fertilizer.

Available in bag or bulk. Apply Calcium Nitrate straight or ask your dealer to include it in your vegetable fertilizer. You'll be glad you did!

As with any fertilizer application, consult your extension office or other advisory service for recommended practice that meets local crop and soil conditions.

USDA Water Quality Project Begins In Lancaster

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The Pequea and Mill creeks in Lancaster County are receiving special attention as part of a USDA water quality project.

The 135,000-acre watershed includes the towns of Gap, White Horse, Bird-In-Hand, Intercourse, Strasburg, Quarryville, and Pequea.

Several agencies are developing initiatives as part of this project to improve the water quality in this area. Penn State Cooperative Extension plans to open an office and have an extension agent to develop educational programs in the areas of nutrient management, integrated pest management, and barnyard runoff.

These programs will target the feed, fertilizer, and ag finance industries, as we as farmers. Educational programs will include educational tours, demonstrations, meetings, and individual visits.

Effective, low-cost methods of controlling barnyard runoff and stream management will be demonstrated on local farms. The feed and fertilizer industries will be closely involved in the program to take advantage of their knowledge of fertilizer and pesticide issues.

In addition, programs will also focus on homeowners. Homeowner issues will deal with well construction, wellhead maintenance, septic system maintenance, and the use of household and lawn chemicals.

The Soil Conservation Service in cooperation with ASCS will initially have $400,000 of cost share money to give to farmers to install conservation practices to improve water quality. SCS hopes to focus the money on water management around barnyards. This will include cost sharing for practices such as terraces around buildings, spouting on barn roofs, stream fencing, and concrete curbs around barnyards.

To get a handle on the amount of pesticide and fertilizer being used in this area, the Lancaster County Conservation District in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture has been conducting a pesticide/groundwater survey in the Pequea and Mill Creek watersheds.

More than 100 farmers have already been surveyed with more than 90 percent participation. In order to be statistically valid, farms were selected at random and an interviewer, paid by the district, is sent to each farm to collect information on the use, storage, and disposal of pesticides, fertilizer, and manure.

Currently, the survey is on hold until farmers get through the busy planting and haymaking time. Later, about 50 more surveys will be taken to complete phase 1, which covers the whole Pequea Mill creek watershed. For phase 2, more detailed information will be collected from smaller wellhead protection areas. Public water supply wells will be chosen and the survey will cover the land areas that contribute to the groundwater recharge of these wells.

The Lancaster Conservation District believes that agriculture should not have to take all the responsibility for the protection of groundwater, so they are requesting that urban areas within the wellhead protection area also be surveyed. This survey will include industrial complexes, homeowners, small businesses, and road departments.

Gerald Heistand, who is in charge of collecting the survey information, said, "Most farmers are concerned about the quality of their groundwater. If we can show through this survey that certain practices are contaminating a farmers well, why wouldn't a landowner want to take corrective action? But before anyone suggests that we change farming, it must be shown that there is a pesticide problem here, that a particular sector or business is causing it, and which practices are to blame."

He said that "this can only be done by carrying out a complete survey in the well protection area, and by taking sufficient water samples to test for pesticides."

Heistand said he is pleased with the cooperation the farming community has given the district. "We realize that it takes time out of a landowner's busy schedule to answer all the questions on the survey. However, accurate information on product use and the way practices are carried out will be important in order that valid conclusions can be drawn."

Personal information collected in this survey will remain confidential. A summary of the results from the entire survey will be made available to all persons who take part in the survey. Any questions concerning this survey can be directed to Gerald Heistand at (717) 299-5361.

The United States Geological Survey, in a related survey, will be conducting water tests on 200 wells in the area. These water tests will measure nitrates and pesticides. It will cost USGS $340 to test each well. All cooperating homeowners will receive a free copy of the results of their water tests.

This project is a USDA project designed to last five years. The Pequea Mill Creek project is one of more than 60 water water quality projects being conducted nationwide as a part of president Bush's water quality initiative.

$425 For 4-H'ers Strawberries

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Can you imagine? $425 for a quart of strawberries?

A quart?

But that's what Clifford A. Firestone, president of Firestone Paper and Supply, paid 10-year-old Stephen Leaman of Lancaster at the Rotary Club's Strawberry Roundup Wednesday.

The strawberries were Earli-glo variety. Thirteen-year-old Joel Leaman, cousin to the champion, won reserve champion, which were sold for $120 to Bob Patterson, president of Lancaster Rehab and Sports Medicine.

Bidders paid more than $1,000 for 17 quarts of strawberries at the auction.

The 4-H'ers attended a marketing workshop to help them learn to sell their produce prior to the auction.

The following were also purchased at the auction:

PDPP Hires Summer Intern

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program has recently hired a summer intern, Stephanie Corbin, to coordinate the program's summer ice cream promotion.

Corbin, a former county dairy princess, started with the program on May 21.

"We are anxious to have Stephanie join our staff," said Brian Ross, PDPP program manager. "Her skills in communications and promotion will be a great asset to the program. We hope she enjoys her internship with the PDPP and learns more about Pennsylvania's dairy industry."

Corbin will be charged with coordinating the PDPP's statewide ice cream promotion, "There's Something About Pennsylvania Ice Cream." The promotion is to be held from July 14 to July 20 at locations across the state.

"I am excited to join the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program's efforts," Corbin said. "I wanted to experience promotion activities at the state level after serving as a dairy princess and county promoter."

She is currently a senior at Grove City College, majoring in secondary education and communications. Following graduation, she said she hopes to work in public relations/communications or teach high school English.

New York, New Jersey Actions Boost Over-Order Premium Effort

KARL BERGER
Special Correspondent

FREDERICK, MD. — Even as basic milk prices continue to stagnate at levels well below the cost of production, local dairy farmers have gotten a boost from several recent state actions supporting higher prices.

State officials in both New York and New Jersey moved last month to provide higher prices through the exercise of existing, if little used, regulatory authority.

The actions have given a boost to dairy farmers throughout the Middle Atlantic region, according to local cooperative officials, by stabilizing the imposition of so-called over-order premiums throughout the region.

In New Jersey, lobbying efforts by farmers and farm groups for state action resulted in an order signed May 31 by Gov. James Florio authorizing a statewide premium on Class I milk to begin June 1. Woodson Moffett Jr., director of the Division of Dairy Industry in the New Jersey Department of Agriculture, proposed the $1.05 per hundredweight premium for a period of one year.

In New York, the state legislature passed a law May 2 to give state Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets Richard McGuire the ability to set prices immediately under existing regulatory authority. McGuire subsequently established $13.85 as a statewide minimum Class I price for June, as well as minimum prices for Class II and Class III milk.

The New York premium is $1.39 higher than the average Class I price in June for Federal Order 2, which regulates the New York City-northern New Jersey milk market. The Class II and Class III minimum price also is higher than expected federal order prices for those classes.

McGuire must still rule formally on the official request for state-regulated prices -- the subject of 12 days of testimony in April -- but his emergency response suggests he will rule for at least a continuation of the current premium, according to observers there.

"We do think he's going to rule favorably," said Gregg McAllister, a spokesman for the Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency. RCMA was instrumental in the lobbying effort that led to the New York action. The over-order bargaining agency formed a subsidiary, the Regional Cooperative Bargaining Agency, expressly for the purpose of requesting emergency action on behalf of more than 35 percent of New York's producers, as required by the new law, McAllister said.

New York's action already has prompted similar responses throughout New England, McAllister noted. In the weeks since the state's action was announced, officials in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Maine and Vermont also have implemented or boosted statewide minimum prices. The emergence of all these state- regulated prices has achieved a more uniform and more widely applicable over-order pricing system than RCMA managed by itself during its heyday in the late 1980s.

Likewise, both the New York and the New Jersey actions have shored up the existing over-order premiums implemented through the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board and the Middle Atlantic Cooperative Milk Marketing Agency in Pennsylvania and the other parts of the Federal Order 4 marketplace, according to Bob Yonkers, a Penn State University dairy economist.

Indeed, the $1.05 level set in New Jersey also is the over-order price that dairy cooperatives and farm groups, at a hearing in May, asked the PMMB to lock into place for the year beginning July 1, said board spokesman Tom Kugel. The current PMMB premium, set at $1.35, is due to expire June 30. The three-member board should rule on the industry's request later this month, according to Kugel.

ADC Couples Compete In Young Cooperator Contest

SOUTHAMPTON (Bucks Co.) — Sixteen young farmer couples from Atlantic Dairy Cooperative will compete in the 21st annual Pennmarva Young Cooperator Contest June 19-21 at the Sheraton Potomac Hotel in Rockville, Md.

Sponsored annually by the Pennmarva Dairymen's Federation, the contest recognizes outstanding leadership skills and knowledge of cooperatives. A panel of three judges will select an Outstanding Young Cooperator couple and four runners-up.

The 16 contestants, known as Young Cooperators, were selected to participate in the program based on their dairy proficiency and community leadership. The couples and the Atlantic districts they represent are as follows:

District 1—Benjamin and Karen Kolb, Spring City; District 3—Stephen and Kathy Aument, Quarrvville; District 4—Herman and Debbie Cook, Newark, Del.; District 5— David and Shirley Garber, Lancaster; District 6—Dale and Deb Hershey, Gap; District 7— Steven and Brenda Hershey, Manheim; District 9—William and Imogene Dietrich, Germansville.

District 10—Gerald and Teresa Reichard, Waynesboro; District 12—Dale and Martha Hershey, Ronks; District 13—Curt and Kimberly Yaple, Houtzdale; District 15— Dale and Cheryl Rice, Chambersburg; District 16—Kevin and Karen Holtzinger, East Berlin; District 18—Lee and Joanne Yoder, Lewistown; District 20—Randall and Karen Huntsman, Martinsburg; District 21—Barry and Wanda Woy, Everett; and District 22—David and Katherine Martin, Granville Summit.

During the contest, the contestants will meet with a panel of three judges and will present a 5-minute impromptu talk on a current dairy industry issue. They will also have the opportunity to tour the nation's Capitol and to meet with their legislators at a Congressional reception sponsored by Pennmarva.

Atlantic's Young Cooperator program is designed to educate young farmer members about cooperatives and the dairy industry. The yearlong program, which includes attendance at board of directors meetings, the annual delegate meeting and educational seminars, develops leadership among cooperative members, ages 21 through 35.

Two other members of the Pennmarva Dairymen's Federation, Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative and the Mid-Atlantic Division of Dairymen Inc., also announce their Outstanding Young Cooperators during the three-day contest.

Over-Order Premium Effort

PMMB has set minimum raw milk prices in excess of federal order minimums since 1988, but the board's jurisdiction is limited to Pennsylvania processors. MACMMA, a bargaining agency that represents the three major Order 4 cooperatives, has been able to extend premiums at the PMMB price throughout the federal order marketplace, which takes in southeastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, northern Virginia and southern New Jersey.

"Putting the $1.05 in New Jersey will help the whole over- order pricing effort by bringing uniformity to a market that particularly in northern New Jersey is subject to individual bargaining," said Jim Fraher, an economist for Atlantic Dairy Cooperative.

Even though most New Jersey dairymen already were receiving a premium through MACMMA or through individual agreements with handlers, the state Class I premium should mean higher prices there, Fraher noted. Proceeds from the state premium will be pooled solely among dairymen in the state rather than throughout an overall market, as is MACMMA's. Because almost all New Jersey milk is used for fluid milk, the state premium will generate an additional 90 cents or so a hundredweight, Moffett said. This is higher than the roughly 50 cents that farmers in southern New Jersey have been getting as a result of MACMMA's efforts to date.

The New York pricing system also has been structured to pool returns among dairymen statewide, McAllister noted. Commissioner McGuire estimated the impact of the premiums on all three classes of milk would be worth an extra 80 cents a hundredweight to dairymen statewide.

However, dairymen in the two states should not necessarily expect an 80-cent or 90-cent increase in their milk checks. Observers note there's a good possibility these state-mandated premiums will displace the existing individually-negotiated premiums that some Order 2 handlers have been paying.

Wanted: People With The Right Stuff

FOCUS
Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association
Call 1 800 DHI TEST for service or information

Last summer Mr. and Mrs. Kent Meyer from Clinton Co. had the right stuff. What stuff? The stuff it takes to be chosen to attend the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives (PCC) Young Cooperative Leaders Conference. Mr. and Mrs. Meyer were sponsored to attend by PA DHIA which is a member of PCC. This was the first time the association was sponsored anyone to this excellent conference.

This year the association will again sponsor one or two members to attend this three day session to learn about farmer cooperatives: why they exist, how they are run, and what they are supposed to do for members. You might wonder why PA DHIA would do that when everyone knows that Penn State runs DHIA. Right? Wrong!

Members run PA DHIA and it's been that way for many years now. The members you elect to represent you on the PA DHIA Board control the association based on guidelines provided by cooperative principles. Directors set the cost of fees, establish the program of services and hire the general manager to run the association.

Educational experiences like the Young Cooperative Leaders Conference provide training in cooperatives and how they work so that the cooperative members attending can take that knowledge home and use it in their own organizations, like DHIA, whether at the local, district, state, or national level. It is through experiences like these that the future volunteer leaders of DHIA are prepared to serve other members.

So, what is the right stuff anyway? Simply this: be between 21 and 35 years of age, have a sincere interest in learning about cooperatives, and be available to attend the conference for three days from July 8-10 at the Days Inn in State College. All costs are paid by the PA DHIA.

Interested, or do you know someone you would like to nominate? If so, please contact Bob Ormsby at 800-344-8378. Who knows, your thoughtful consideration now could start a future volunteer leader on a path of lifelong service to fellow cooperative members. All it takes is the right stuff!

Home Run Winners To Be Recognized

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Harrisburg Senators' baseball season is just warming up and three Harrisburg area residents have joined the fun by winning a year's supply of ice cream.

These winners will be recognized at a special ceremony at Riverside Stadium on Tuesday, June 11, 1991, prior to the Senators' game with the Hagerstown Suns.

The game will also feature a new starting pitcher for the Senators. Pennsylvania's Secretary of Agriculture, Boyd E. Wolff, will deliver the game's first pitch. Wolff is taking a small step back from his appearance with the Pittsburgh Pirates last month, but is none the less ready to play.

The winners, Bob Campbell of Camp Hill, Kay Straub of Carlisle, and Clarence Moul of Marysville, all have won a year's supply of ice cream courtesy of the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program and Giant Foods of Carlisle.

Campbell won on April 11, when Bob Natal, the Senators' catcher, hit a home run over the ice cream contest billboard.

The Senators' outfielder, Chris Cassels, helped Straub on May 5, 1991, win ice cream when he hit a home run during the radio, 'Ice Cream Home Run Inning.'

Then on May 20, Moul won his prize as Chris Martin, the Senators' shortstop, hit a home run, again, over the ice cream billboard.

Both Campbell and Moul won their prizes because their game day program was stamped and a Senator hit a home run over the PDPP/Giant Foods, Ice Cream Billboard in Right Center Field. Straub won her prize during the fourth inning, radio broadcast contest, the 'Ice Cream Home Run Inning.' Her name was drawn from entries collected at 10 Harrisburg area Giant Food Stores.

The contests will continue throughout the Senators' baseball season. To date, more than 100 people have received consolation prizes, half gallons of ice cream, through both contests.

Residents interested in winning a year's supply of ice cream can visit their neighborhood Giant Store and enter the drawing, or purchase a game day program at any Senator home game.

On Friday evening, June 21, a chicken barbecue and dinner will be served from 3:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. and the auction of flowers, food and crafts will be held. On Saturday, June 22, will be the main auction day. A country style buffet breakfast is from 6:00 a.m. to 9:00 a.m. and the auction begins. Maple Dell Doing Well With 4-H Program

EVA MARTIN
Maryland Correspondent

WOODBINE, Md. — David and Ann Patrick and their family own and operate Maple Dell Farm just south of Woodbine. The love and care exhibited by the Patrick family is what you hear and read about, but seldom have the opportunity to observe. Their genuine friendliness and care of others is shown in their concern to bring farm and city together.

Three years ago, Maryland initiated a 4-H Dairy Cattle Leasing Program to provide non-farm youth and youth from farms with non-registered cattle the opportunity to work with registered dairy animals as a 4-H project.

This year, five children of the Larry Russell Family from Mt. Airy are participating with the Patricks in this program. Mr. Russell knew the Patrick family from earlier days when he occasionally worked on the farm.

Jeremiah, 15, began his project last year inspiring his other brothers and sisters to accept the challenge. Jeremiah is in the ninth grade at Glenelg High School and has a senior yearling Ayrshire heifer called Maple Dell Swingers Singer. Jeremiah says he has never seen a calf born and is looking forward to having his heifer calve, hopefully in March. At the recent Wills Show, Jeremiah placed second in Fitting and Showing and third in class placings. He commented, "The Patrick family are nice and generous people. I am learning a lot about cows. It's fun and a lot of hard work. I would like to have a farm and herd of my own some day, or pursue a career in working with and showing cattle."

The Patricks are fond of Jeremiah and asked him to go with them for a week at the Eastern National Show last year, but his mother didn't want him to miss school.

Jeremiah's twin sister, Joellia, has a summer yearling Ayrshire heifer, Maple-Dell IRS Firefly. She really enjoys leading her animal and working to get her ready for show. She says the first day they came to the Patrick farm to work, daughters Carol and Rhonda spent four hours helping them with their animals, leading them, washing, brushing, and teaching them techniques for showing. Joellia says, "It's fun until they step on your toes!" She won fourth place in fitting and showing at the Wills show, "because I didn't look at the judge", but placed first in class placings.

Antonio, 17, the oldest in the family, is a junior at Glenelg High. He says, "my first experience working with my heifer, Chrissy, was not as bad as I thought it would be". One of the things Antonio really likes is that this is a family project, each having their own animal, but they can work together and help each other.

Thirteen year old April attends Glenwood Middle School. Her heifer is a Junior Yearling named Bryanna. She says, "this has been a fun experience, but I don't like getting dirty." She says they learn a lot from coming to the Patrick farm and working with their animals.

Jonathan, 11, has an intermediate heifer calf, Plum-Bottom Hemlock Maple. He likes to brush his heifer and it shows. The fitting and showing judge at the Wills show commented that although Jonathan was fifth in the class, he had the cleanest animal in the show. He doesn't like when his heifer stops when you try to walk her. Jonathan also has three geese as a 4-H project.

The lease agreement signed by the sponsor, 4-H'er and 4-H'er's parents set forth guidelines of what the sponsor expects from the 4-H'er in return for the use of their animal. The Patricks require the 4-H'er to work with their animals, training them to lead, preparing them for fitting and showing, including clipping their own animals. It is also specified in the agreement that they will help care for their own animals at shows.

Another aspect of Farm and City coming together on the Patrick farm is farm tours for nursery, pre-school and school children.

Ann Patrick takes a special interest in this project, helping children and their parents learn about the farm and the special care farmers take to give them good and safe products for their tables.

She begins her tour with the calves in the hutches, showing how well they are cared for on an individual basis. Then as they move on to the box stalls where they are grouped, she tells the children the calves are like children going to kindergarten and learning to get along with other children.

Ann believes hands-on experience, allowing the children to touch, feed, and feel animals, is important to their understanding of what takes place on the farm. Cotton seed meal, soybean meal, alfalfa hay and corn silage are shown to the children and she explains how, when mixed together, they form a total ration for the nutritional needs of the dairy animals. She emphasizes recycling, using the whole stalk of corn, even the fodder for bedding and then returning the manure for plant food to the fields.

In the milking parlor is a blackboard on which treated cows are marked. In case one is missed there, a secondary precaution is a red leg band. She lets children volunteer to be a treated cow, placing the red leg bands on their legs to emphasize the milk from these cows is never to be put in the tank for their consumption.

Ann says although they are concerned about the insurance risk of bringing so many children to the farm, the rewards of seeing the enlightment in their eyes as they learn is what is important to her.

Ground Broke For New Farm Show Building

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)—Officials broke ground for a $3.3 million addition to the state Farm Show complex Wednesday morning. Construction of the livestock exhibition hall was announced by Gov. Robert Casey in his weekly radio address last Saturday.

Dennis Grumbine, farm show commission, said those who have followed the proposals for this building have waited a long time. "Most of the agriculture community anticipated that this would never happen," Grumbine said. "Finally, today, we are here to prove to the public that it is going to happen.

"The new addition will give us a lot of space that can be utilized in many different ways. It will certainly enhance the Farm Show, Livestock Expo and the All-American dairy show. A few shows that have had trouble with space will now be able to come to the complex."

Boyd Wolff, state ag secretary, said the additional exhibit space will help to further improve the farm show that has already been greatly improved in recent years. "We've managed to promote more excitement and higher sale prices for the Farm Show's Junior Livestock Show and Sale," Wolff said. "In addition, we have added a new food court and other improvements to the show that is Pennsylvania's version of a State Fair.

"This new building plus the new roof, lighting and sound system in the Farm Show Complex will help keep the farm show viable and able to pay proper tribute to the farm industry."

The new wing, which was authorized but not funded in 1957, will add another 82,000 feet to the 14-acre farm show complex. The $3.3 million funding for the new building comes on top of $5 million already invested in a variety of improvements to the entire Farm Show Complex. These improvements include a new roof, lighting and a state-of-the-art sound system.

Gov. Casey said funding the project is an investment in the future of farming in Pennsylvania, stressing that the State Farm Show provides a national showcase for the Commonwealth's leading industry.

The 75-year-old annual state Farm Show is the largest indoor agriculture event in the nation. It pumps more than $7.5 million into the central Pennsylvania economy each January.

Boyd Wolff, state secretary of agriculture, turns the first spade of dirt to start the new building project at the farm show complex. Helping in the photograph is Dennis Grumbine, left, farm show commission, and Fred King and Neal Buss, deputy secretaries of agriculture.

Maple Dell Doing Well

The Ayrshires of Maple-Dell Farm have honors of two Championships at the National Show at Madison and three Eastern National Champions. The Patrick Ayrshires have attended Blasts, indoor soccer; Bays, outdoor soccer; Skipjacks, hockey; and Orioles, baseball games for cow milking contests.

David volunteers his time on many boards, serving as Vice-President of PDCA; President of the Maryland Dairy Shrine, Board member of the National Ayrshire Asso., and Dairymen, Inc. to name a few. He is also a technician for Sire Power and serves on their Ayrshire Sire Selection Committee.

David was given a surprise birthday party last year with his friends bringing all sorts of ties, broad, narrow, old and new and pinning them to the washline. He prides himself in a professional appearance, even wearing a tie when he goes to a farm to breed cattle.

Ann takes pride in raising the calves that are housed in hutches in the backyard just beyond the house. Their sons Mike and Denny work full time with the dairy operation and harvesting of crops. Mike is married and has three girls, Missy, Nicky and Becky. Missy and Becky just won Grand Champion and Junior Champion Ayrshire respectively at the recent Wills Show. Denny and wife built a home at the end of the farm lane. They have twins, Catlin and Derek.

John travels much of the time hauling cattle and fitting cattle for other exhibitors at various shows across the country. He also helps out on the farm when not traveling.

Teresa and husband who live in Rockville, just bought their first calf. Kathy works for a Pharmaceutical in the distribution of veterinary products. Carol just finished college and is working for an insurance company. Rhonda is attending college and works part time off the farm for a bank.

Come show time, the family unite in their effort to show champion cattle and to promote farm and city coming together.

PFU Meets In Minnesota

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Allen Deiter and Robert Junk met with a group of dairy producers in St. Paul, Minnesota to say they favor the two-tier program as the best supply-management option for the dairy industry.

The meeting, held during USDA's two-week comment period on its supply-management analysis, was conducted to seek input from Farmers Union members and get their recommendations for the policy. USDA was directed by the farm bill to analyze such proposals, and is expected to issue a final report to Congress on June 15.

The deadline was moved up after milk prices plummeted last winter.

NFU Assistant Legislative Director Cheryl Cook, said the Minnesota meeting underscored the popularity of two-tier. "But of the 31 flavors of two-tier that were proposed, USDA only analyzed vanilla," she said. "Now they need to examine the variations before the final report is issued."

NFU criticized USDA for giving little consideration to two-tier in its initial report. Pennsylvania Farmers Union (PFU) has been advocating, writing, and calling in favor of the National Farmers Union two-tier proposal.

The NFU proposal would give dairy producers a support price based on cost of production plus a reasonable profit on one level, or tier, of production.

If a farmer chose to produce more than that base, he would be penalized with drastically lower support price on that tier. Almost three-fourths of the 81 proposals submitted to USDA before May 15 were some version of a two-tier system.

Questions raised by Cheryl Cook concerned assumptions were made by the USDA and they are easy to challenge. For instance, the USDA analysts assumed that bovine growth hormones, the controversial milk output enhancers now pending approval by the Food and Drug Administration, would be used by farmers next year.

If that's the case, it would alter the supply-demand equations dramatically. This is a premature assumption that the FDA will approve BGH.

NFU President Leland Swenson said the Minnesota meeting was held "to explain USDA's analysis to producers and to gather input."

PFU President Allen Dieter has been attending all Milk Marketing hearings and dairy meetings to explain the PFU position and two-tier pricing.

He has emphasized the need for USDA to fully examine the proposal by NFU and make sure that dairy producers get the fairest price and reasonable profit.

Other members of Farmers Union and the Farmers Union Milk Producers Association have been testifying and advocating for action for the dairy industry in Pennsylvania.

Annual Forages - Another Look

After a wet, early spring in most areas of the Northeast much of May was exceedingly warm and dry. And while first cuttings of perennial hay crops came off early and generally in good shape, second cuttings could be affected by lack of moisture. Furthermore, several weather forecasters suggest a hotter and dryer than normal summer in many areas of the East. And this could affect the corn crop.

Thus, you may want to take a moment now to assess your 1991 feed needs. And if there is a chance you may be short, you can still plug annual forage crops into this year's cropping plans. Two weeks ago I reviewed the Brassicas. These offer one possibility for pasture. The other possibility includes the warm weather annual grasses such as the sudangrasses and sorghum-sudangrass hybrids. These grasses are not ideal for hay, but among the annuals there are crops that make excellent supplemental pasture, green chop or silage. And they are heat and drought tolerant and are very productive when moisture and fertility are adequate.

Here's another brief run-down of your choices:

Sudangrasses have finer stems and are usually slightly higher in digestibility than the sorghum-sudangrass hybrids, but they are also usually lower yielding. Piper Sudangrass, the most widely grown variety, is also the lowest in prussic acid potential, and is normally used for pasture. Hybrid sudangrasses such as Beachley-Hardy's Suretreat produce somewhat more forage than Piper but also may have a slightly greater prussic acid potential. However, this difference is small and with good management the sudangrass hybrids are excellent for summer pasture as well as green chop and silage.

Sorghum-sudangrass hybrids such as RSII are usually much higher yielding than Piper and are used mostly in a green chop or silage situation. They do have a higher prussic acid potential and must be managed more carefully during the summer and fall.

These multi-harvest, warm season annual grasses can be planted right now and will usually be ready for grazing or green chop about 6 or 7 weeks after planting. They can be no-till seeded in stubble or sod, or drill planted on a prepared seedbed. In the absence of a soil test 50 to 75 pounds each of N, P_2O_5 and K_2O worked into the seedbed before planting is desirable. In general, seeding rates of 30-35 pounds per acre for the sudangrasses or 35-45 pounds per acre for the sudan-sorghum hybrids are adequate. If you plant a sudan-sorghum hybrid specifically for silage a mixture of soybeans (90 lb. per acre) and the hybrid (25 lb. per acre) can be used.

Piper sudangrass can be grazed when it reaches a height of 18" with no danger of prussic acid; a two foot height is recommended for sudangrass hybrids. If properly fertilized and managed these crops can normally be grazed two or three times during the growing season. The sudan-sorghum hybrids should reach a height of 2½ -3 feet before grazing or chopping. At earlier stages, the forage will be higher in quality but may contain unsafe levels of prussic acid. If cut at a stubble height of five to six inches they will recover rapidly for a second crop.

If harvested for direct-cut silage these crops should be allowed to reach the early head to early bloom stage of growth. If harvested for silage at more immature stages wilting is desirable. While hay made from these crops harvested at the more immature stage is fair to good in quality, field curing can be a serious problem; thus, the use of a hay conditioner is essential.

Japanese Millet seeded at the rate of 15 lbs. per acre is occasionally grown as an annual forage on the cold, poorly drained soils of Northern Pennsylvania and New York while Pearl Millet may be used in the lower Mid-Atlantic regions. However, these crops produce little or no aftermath and are generally considered inferior to the sudangrasses where the sudangrasses can be grown.

The drought and heat tolerant forage sorghums grown alone or with soybeans can be grown for silage in place of corn. Under favorable growing conditions adapted corn hybrids harvested as silage are said to yield slightly more feed per acre. However, the sorghums are more drought resistant and less subject to damage from deer where deer feeding on corn is a problem. When grown alone, row plant at the rate of 8 to 12 pounds per acre. Fertilize as for corn. If grown with soybeans use 90 pounds per acre of beans and 6 to 8 pounds of sorghum. Harvest for silage when the sorghum is in the soft to medium dough stage of growth.

It's too early to accurately predict the moisture conditions for this growing season. Thus, planting some acreage to a summer annual could be a good hedge against the unknown.

Group Seeks Dairy Farmers For Exchange Program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — WANTED: Dairy farmers sought for cultural and technical exchange with Egyptian farmers. Washington, D.C. based non-profit organization will bring 80 Egyptian dairy farmers to the United States for three-week farm-stays this year.

This cultural exchange between American families and program participants serves as a rich learning experience for everyone. It offers a unique chance to learn about Egyptian culture, while providing an opportunity for Egyptians to learn about American farming techniques. Host farmers will receive $20 a day to cover their costs.

Host farmers will participate in designing programs to expose the Egyptians to current cultivation practices and farm management operations. Each program will center around on-farm experiences as the participants take part in the daily routine of American farmers including meetings with the farmer's agricultural extension agent, cooperative representatives, suppliers, and neighboring growers.

ACDI will provide logistical support and work closely with the American farmer to arrange the program.

Farmers who are interested in participating in the project may write to Linda Schmid at ACDI 50 F. Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20001 or call (202) 638-4661.

Jr. Holstein Judging Schools Set

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The 1991 Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Association Judging Schools are in final planning stages.

All junior members, regardless of breed orientation, are invited to attend the school nearest to their home. 4-H and FFA members are also invited to attend one of the schools.

The two-day schools run from noon one day to noon the next. Twelve classes are judged, each person in attendance has an opportunity to work one-on-one with an experienced judge on giving reasons. All the basics of judging cattle are covered by our school official.

The school officials this year are Richard Keene, Gilbertsville, N.Y., and Curtis Day, of Shippensburg. They are both well-known judges having worked national shows. They are excellent teachers. Both have spent a lot of time working with their respective county 4-H judging teams.

The Western School is to be held July 7 and July 8, with Blair County Holstein Club acting as host. Curtis Day is to be the official for that school. Host farms include that of John and Robert Black, the Thomas Kelley farm, Burket Falls Farms, Bernetto Gable and David Stonerook.

The Eastern School is scheduled for July 9 and July 10 in Susquehanna County with Richard Keene serving as official.

The cost is $25 each for those staying overnight. That includes school costs, hotel room and an evening meal. For commuters, the cost is $15, which covers school costs and an evening meal.

This year, a second member of the same family attending the school receives a $5 registration discount.

To attend, fill out the entry form and return it by June 21 to: Pa. Holstein Association, 839 Benner Pike, State College, 16801.

For more information, call (814) 234-0364.

AGA Announces National Convention Plans

The 114th American Guernsey Association (AGA) annual meeting will be held in St. Louis, Mo., on June 24. The convention, scheduled for June 21-24, will be held at the Breckenridge Frontenac Hotel.

The Missouri Guernsey Breeders' Association has planned a number of relaxing, enjoyable social events during the weekend prior to the meeting.

Some of the activities include a tour of the Gateway Arch of St. Louis, a Cardinals baseball game, the Missouri Botanical Gardens, Anheuser Busch Brewery and a Missouri hometown dinner. These are just a few of the activities planned during the convention.

For the youth some of the events scheduled include a quiz bowl competition, the queen contest and spending a day at the amusement park, "Six Flags Over Mid-America".

During the annual youth banquet, Saturday evening, the national outstanding Guernsey youth will be named as well as the Outstanding Young Guernsey Farmer and the 1991 National Guernsey Queen will be crowned.

Some of the awards presented at this year's convention include the Master Breeder Award which will be awarded to J. Jene Mungle of Atoka, Ok.

Breeder and developer of Mungles Guernsey Farm, Mr. Mungle has contributed many years of dedicated service and quality cattle to the Guernsey breed. He was the breeder of the national grand champion at last year's show in Louisville, Ky.

Leslie Peckham of Fort Atkinson, Wis., is the recipient of the AGA Distinguished Service Award.

Peckham has spent 27 years working for the AGA promoting the Guernsey cow. His main area was Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa, but he has gained great respect nation-wide for his knowledge and dedication to the Guernsey breed.

Directors for district five and director-at-large will be announced at the annual meeting on June 24.

Eldon Moss of Iowa City, Iowa, and Phil Tennis of Hayward, Minn., are the two nominees for district five. All active members of district five are eligible to vote by ballot until June 23.

This district is comprised of the states of Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota. Director at large is contested by incumbent Dave Bolin of Clarksville, Iowa, and Kevin Nedrow of Clifton Springs, New York. All active members nation-wide are eligible to vote.

Following the annual meeting, the National Convention and Heifer Sale will be held in the grand ballroom at the Breckenridge Frontenac Hotel. Approximately 55 head of top quality Guernseys from around the United States will be auctioned.

Headlining the sale are Excellent cows with high production, fancy show heifers, bull packages and potential bull mothers.

For more information concerning the AGA convention, contact co-chairmen, Dave and Linda Cochard, Rt 4. Box 37, Union, Missouri 63804 or (314)583-8901 or call the American Guernsey Association at (614) 864-2409.

Farm Fresh Summer Dairy Values!

Park Myers nudges the oxen on . . . and hopes to sell all 4,500 pounds of them to a farmer who wants gentle, very hard working animals for a variety of farm chores and also for tourist attractions. Photo by Andy Andrews.

Some Gentle Oxen For Sale

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Park Myers hopes he gets some response.

He recently purchased two Holstein oxen from Belleville Auction in Mifflin Co. They were born and worked in Somerset Co.

All 4,500 pounds of them, for a total of $4,000.

"They're only three years old," he said.

Myers wants to advertise in farm papers and hopes to sell them privately.

"They're really easy to handle, and they keep on going," said Myers. "They can harrow, plow, and haul, and they really work hard. They're gentle around kids."

Myers said the animals are "easy to talk to and will work 8 to 10 hours a day," he said.

The Holstein oxen were pulling a corn wagon on Quarry Rd. near Manheim last week. Myers said the cattle were hauled from the auction in a cattle trailer.

"They'd be great in parades, tourist attractions, or petting zoos," he said.

Pa. Game Commission Hearing Examines Crop Damage Problems

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Farmers with crop damage problems should plan to attend the nearest upcoming Pennsylvania Game Commission hearing on deer management, according to Mel Eckhaus, director of local affairs for the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA).

The Game Commission will be conducting six regional public meetings this month to review past and present deer herd management practices and to discuss future management plans.

"We're encouraging farmers with deer damage problems to get to the meeting early," said Eckhaus. "Anyone who signs up before the meetings will be given the floor for up to five minutes to share their concerns."

Each meeting is scheduled to run from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Locations and directions are as follows:

Northwest Region — June 12 at the Rocky Grove Fire Hall, approximately two miles north of Franklin on Route 417.

Southwest Region — June 13 at the Latrobe High School Auditorium. From Route 30, travel south on Route 981 toward the Latrobe Airport. Travel one-fourth mile and take the first road to the left. Travel one and one-half miles to the Latrobe High School on the left.

Northcentral Region — June 19 at the Bucktail Area High School Auditorium, approximately one mile south of Renovo on Route 120.

Southcentral Region — June 20 at the Indian Valley Middle School Auditorium, located two miles west of Reedsville on Route 322 near Milroy.

Southeast Region — June 24 at the Schuylkill Valley High School Auditorium, one mile south of Leesport at the intersection of Route 61 and Route 73.

Northeast Region — June 25 at the Tunkhannock High School Auditorium, located along Route 6, east of Route 29 in Tunkhannock.

Signs will be posted to help individuals find the meeting locations.

PFA plans to present testimony during the meetings.

ULTRAFLO OUT-PERFORMS CHAIN

Over 50 Million Birds In 6 Years Prove It

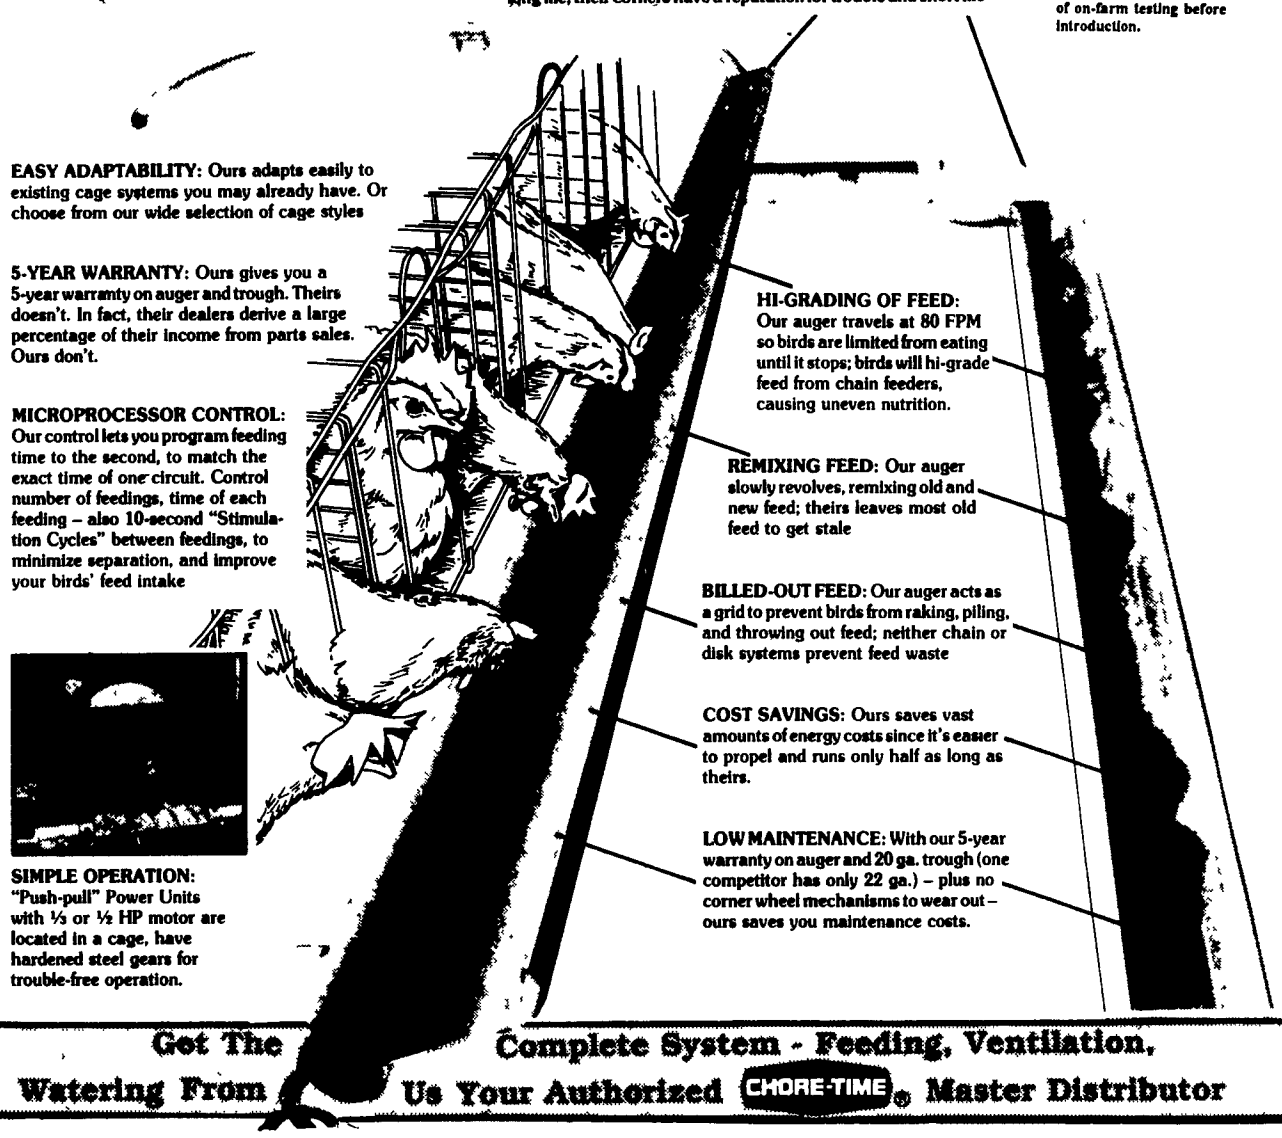
Chore-Time's ULTRAFLO® feeder for layers, pullets and breeders

We have probably been too modest up to now about the merits of our new generation ULTRAFLO® cage feeder vs. the old style chain feeders some of our competitors are still trying to sell you. In fact, the only negative comments about our feeder come from our competition, not our customers. So we would like to point out the bare facts:

FEED SAVINGS: On-farm results show a feed savings of ½ lb. per 100 birds per day – over $10,000 per year savings on a 100,000-bird house. Year after year

TROUBLE-FREE DESIGN: Our feeder has only two moving parts – the one-piece auger plus each drive wheel; their chain has more. Our corners are heavy 12 ga. zinc plated tubing for long life; their corners have a reputation for trouble and short life

PROVEN DESIGN: Over 45 million birds are already on our feeder worldwide. Also, it was proven in 5 years of on-farm testing before introduction.



EASY ADAPTABILITY: Ours adapts easily to existing cage systems you may already have. Or choose from our wide selection of cage styles

5-YEAR WARRANTY: Ours gives you a 5-year warranty on auger and trough. Theirs doesn't. In fact, their dealers derive a large percentage of their income from parts sales. Ours don't.

MICROPROCESSOR CONTROL: Our control lets you program feeding time to the second, to match the exact time of one circuit. Control number of feedings, time of each feeding – also 10-second "Stimulation Cycles" between feedings, to minimize separation, and improve your birds' feed intake

HI-GRADING OF FEED: Our auger travels at 80 FPM so birds are limited from eating until it stops; birds will hi-grade feed from chain feeders, causing uneven nutrition.

REMIXING FEED: Our auger slowly revolves, remixing old and new feed; theirs leaves most old feed to get stale

BILLED-OUT FEED: Our auger acts as a grid to prevent birds from raking, piling, and throwing out feed; neither chain or disk systems prevent feed waste

COST SAVINGS: Ours saves vast amounts of energy costs since it's easier to propel and runs only half as long as theirs.

LOW MAINTENANCE: With our 5-year warranty on auger and 20 ga. trough (one competitor has only 22 ga.) – plus no corner wheel mechanisms to wear out – ours saves you maintenance costs.

SIMPLE OPERATION: "Push-pull" Power Units with ⅓ or ½ HP motor are located in a cage, have hardened steel gears for trouble-free operation.

AGRICULTURE'S LEADING EDGE FFA

Northeast DHIA Announces New York State Quality Awards

Among the approximate 4,500 Northeast Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA) members who are measuring the quality of milk produced on their farm with the DHIA Somatic Cell Count Report, five hundred ninety one have won Outstanding Quality Milk Awards based on 1990 records. To qualify for this award, members must maintain an average rolling tank somatic cell count of 175,000 or less and must be signed up on the Somatic Cell Program for a minimum of 6 months.

The DHI Somatic Cell Count Report is a valuable monthly monitor of individual, group average and herd average somatic cell counts. Somatic cells are white blood cells and milk-secreting cells normally found in milk. The major factors contributing to high somatic cell count milk are clinical and subclinical udder infections. Low somatic cell count milk comes from healthy udders.

Constant monitoring of barn and pasture cleanliness, working condition and cleanliness of milking equipment, milking technique, and udder infection is necessary to achieve the low level of somatic cell count recognized by the DHIA Quality Milk Award. The following Northeast DHIA members are praised for their diligence and success in producing this outstanding, quality milk.

Editor's note: This second of an eight-article series written by the five Southeastern/Central Penn State Extension Farm Management Agents, covering various farm profitability and efficiency measurement tools and ratios.

In these uncertain economic times, lenders have become increasingly cautious and may require more financial information than you have provided in the past. Their purpose is to carefully evaluate your financial situation and judge your ability to meet loan obligations. Solvency and liquidity measures are two of the most commonly used tools to evaluate the financial health of a business.

Much of the information necessary to compute these measures is found on the balance sheet. This provides a "snapshot" of the financial situation of the business at a specific point in time. It should be developed at the end of each financial year by every farm manager. Comparison of successive balance sheets will then provide a general indication of business progress.

Solvence
Net Worth

Solvency calculations begin with a comparison of total assets and liabilities. The difference is net worth. A positive net worth (assets greater than liabilities) indicates that the business is solvent while a negative net worth (liabilities greater than assets) means that the business is insolvent.

The net worth of a business reflects owner equity and is a very general indicator of the risk involved in making a loan to that business. A large net worth relative to total assets means that a loan would be well secured and the risk of default small. A small net worth could present an obstacle to securing credit because the risk of loss to the lender is greater.

There are numerous ratios used in balance sheet analysis to evaluate solvency and liquidity. However, these ratios should only be used as tools for an initial evaluation and not to answer specific questions about problems within the business. They are only general indicators pointing to a need for further investigation.

Net Capital Ratio

The net capital ratio is a common measure of solvency and is calculated by dividing total assets by total liabilities. A solvent business is one with a ratio of 1:1 or higher (one dollar of assets for each dollar of liabilities). A financially healthy business should have a net capital ratio of at least 2.5:1, indicating that owner equity is at least 60 percent of all assets used in the business.

Debt-Equity Ratio

The debt-equity ratio is a measure of solvency that reflects the relationship between borrowed and owned (equity) capital and is commonly used by lenders. It is calculated by dividing total debt by owner equity. A ratio of less than 1:1 indicates that the owner of the business owns a larger share of that business than the lender. One of the best uses for this ratio is a comparison from one year to another to asses the changes in debt over time. As the ratio decreases, owner equity increases. A financially health business should have a debt-equity ratio of 2:3 (.67) or less, but this will vary with the quality of management, the source of income and the level of profits.

Liquidity

A financially healthy business will have a greater amount of current assets than current liabilities ("current" indicates an impact on the business within one year). Generally current assets should at least equal 1.5 times total current liabilities.

This excess is needed to serve as a financial cushion in case of a rapid drop in the price of current assets (such as a crop). A rapid decrease in price of current assets could destroy the liquidity of a business if there are barely enough current assets to cover current liabilities.

The excess of current assets also indicates good financial health because the excess is the source of working capital (the funds necessary for covering day to day expenses).

A shortage of working capital may mean borrowing additional funds or liquidating longer-term assets (i.e. machinery or land) to cover current operating expenses. Neither of these options are advisable because borrowing additional funds may take too long, and selling other assets may reduce future production capacity or the ability to borrow.

Current Debt Ratio

The current ratio measures current liabilities relative to total liabilities as follows:

Current Debt Ratio = Current liabilities /Total liabilities

The current debt ratio indicates the part of total debt that must be repaid within a year. A 1:5 ratio (or .2) indicates that 20 percent of total debt must be repaid within one year. The higher the ratio, the greater the drain on cash reserves and the greater the risk of being unable to meet current financial obligations. A high ratio could indicate a need to refinance to convert part of the current debt into a longer-term obligation. However, be careful not to dig yourself into a deeper hole by converting current debt into long-term liabilities without a realistic plan for repayment.

The current debt ratio must be interpreted with care and probably should be used only to put other ratios in perspective because it does not include net worth. For example, an individual with $500,000 net worth and $5,000 of debt composed of $4,000 of current liabilities and $1,000 of longer term liabilities would have a current debt ratio of 4:5 (.8) but is not in immediate financial danger.

-C. David Lichty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lichty, Paradise, was presented the American Agriculturist Foundation Award at commencement exercises at Pequea Valley High School Friday night.

The award, presented to the senior in vocational agriculture showing the greatest achievement and most accomplishment in agriculture during the year, carries with it a certificate and a book entitled, "How To Write and Speak for Rural Audiences."

Lichty, the fourth senior in his school to win the annual award, earlier in the year won the Keystone Farmer degree in the Future Farmers of America. He also was given the DeKalb award for agricultural excellence in his school.

-Marjorie Jane Thurston has been named assistant home economist in Lancaster County.

Dr. H. R. Albrecht, director of the Agricultural and Home Economics Extension Service at the Pennsylvania State University, in announcing her appointment, said she will begin her duties June 19 and that she will assist with the county's adult and 4-H homemaking program.

-Elvin Hess, Elizabethtown, has been elected teacher of vocational agriculture in the Elizabethtown Area High School, it was learned this week.

He will replace Marlin Henninger who has resigned to return to Lykens Valley, Dauphin County, to enter the feed mill and farm machinery business with his father and brother. Henninger organized the vocational agriculture department at the high school two years ago.

-Glenn A. Shirk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman A. Shirk, Quarryville R1, today was named as assistant county agent by Penn State University, effective June 19.

-Society of Farm Women 6 voted to donate $50 to the Agriculture Center at the June 3 meeting of the group.

Meeting at the home of the Misses Lela and Stella Coble, the society heard Mrs. Norma DeLellis, associate county home economics agent speak on ways to improve household storage.

Mrs. Willis Hackman served as hostess along with the Misses Coble. Devotions were given by Leta Coble.

After an auction held by the president, Mrs. Keener, refreshments were served to 40 members and friends of the hostesses.

Support for funding for vo-ag education in the Dept. of Education has been seriously lacking for the past ten years.

2. An Agricultural and Rural Youth Development Act will mandate by law that qualifying agricultural and rural youth groups receive the funds they need and deserve.

2. There is no reason to believe, according to past and present facts, that any new found empathy will be sustainable without legislative law.

This bill will come before the legislature any day now!

Now is the time for all of us who are interested in the "future" of agriculture, or 4-H and FFA youth, to write our local Pennsylvania representatives in the legislature supporting this bill. And don't forget to write to Governor Casey and Secretary Boyd Wolff.

Our written support of HB 1344 is crucial and critical. Take ten minutes to write your letter of support as an active member, alumni, parent, teacher, county agent or just friend of the 4-H and FFA. A yes vote by our legislators means a possibility of funding from $2,500 to $15,000 a piece for our local chapters and clubs.

Howcrest Opens Farm

nowledgement from the National Holstein Association. Each state has only one award presented each year. All the state winners then are compared by judges and the national awardee decided.

All dairymen in Lancaster County area have a chance to see the Howards' farm and talk with the young couple. Their farm, just south of Lancaster City on Hans Herr Drive, is the site for this year's Lancaster County Holstein Association Field Day. An evening of fellowship and fun is planned, starting 6:30 p.m., on June 18.

The speaker and official judge is to be Pete Blodgett, head of Landmark Genetics. The meal is catered chicken barbeque with numerous side dishes.

The cost is $8 per adult, $3.75 per child. Reservations are needed by Wednesday, June 12. For more information or reservations, call Lynn Royer at (717) 560-0632, or 564-2304 (farm), or call Steve Hershey at (717) 367-4593.

The 1990 end-of-the-year rolling herd average for Howcrest Holsteins' 40 head was 23,063 pounds of milk, 868 pounds of fat and 744 pounds of protein. Lancaster County's top producing herd for protein last year was a mixed herd which average nine pounds of protein higher.

The most recent DHIA report for Howcrest shows an increase in average production. According to the May test, the average was 24,148 pounds of milk, 913 pounds of fat and 777 pounds of protein on twice a day milking.

At their last classification they had seven Excellents, now reduced to five through attrition, including the loss of one of the original purchases made to start the operation.

Those who attend the field day will have a chance to judge three classes of cattle with four in each. The classes are tentatively going to be 2-year-olds, aged cows, and a heifer class.

John said the herd is mostly traced back to four groups of animals he and Susan purchased.

He purchased a group of bred heifers from a farm in Port Royal which included a Jet Stream daughter which eventually classified an Excellent 92.

Also in the group was an Excellent Elevation daughter, which has been "The foundation of the family that there's been the most interest in," John said.

"She had a 98 point Valiant daughter that's a contract cow. She has a couple of sons in AI and was flushed to Ned Boy."

One of her Ned Boy daughter has also been contracted to AI and flushed. From there have been two Very Goods, an 86 and an 87.

"I also bought a group of bred heifers from Clarion County, which included a Genesis daughter with several thousand-pound fat records," John said.

A Morris Tony daughter produced the first cows John and Susan merchandised.

There are still members of that family in the herd, and the Howards are currently proving her grandson.

The Howards also bought a group of heifers during the 1981 Central Pennsylvania Classic sale. There they picked up Ivanhoe Star and three of her decendants are home bred Excellents. Two are still on the farm and one was sold to Keystone.

"Star has been the foundation for a lot of show cows," John said. "Last year we had best three females bred and owned, we won the last three years, and they all came from that (cow) family."

The one he sold was a Mark daughter of Ivanhoe Star that was consigned at a State College sale to Keystone and eventually went Excellent.

The Howards have pretty much kept a closed herd since buying those initial groups. They said they bought four animals since.

All the animals will be on display during the field day.

Visitors will also get a chance to view a new barn ventilation system that should be completed by the field day. It is designed for a complete barn air exchange every 30 seconds.

The barn and the house at Howcrest are historic.

John and Susan rent the 70-acre farm from her mother, Dorothy Frey, of Fultonway Farm Inc., and they also rent an additional, adjacent 40 acres for cropping.

The farm house and the Howcrest property is adjacent to the historic Hans Herr house, a well-known Lancaster landmark. It was one of the earliest buildings of Hans Herr, an original German settler to the Lancaster area whose house still stands at the edge of the Howards property, within a stone's throw of the farm house.

In fact, for the field day, John said he has gotten approval to use the parking lot of the historic landmark.

Those who are intending to attend the field day should bring some lawn chairs and park in the Hans Herr parking lot.

The Hans Herr house is a remarkable structure, using one solid wooden beam and a huge, double-sided walk-in fireplace and chimney for the main support structure and wall-tie. When Susan Howard was growing up, prior to the restoration of the Hans Herr house and its subsequent use as a historic landmark, she said she used to play in the house.

The farmhouse in which they live, and five other homes nearby, where also either built by Hans Herr or one of his decendents.

"This house was built by Hans Herr," Susan said of their farmhouse. "It's like living in a piece of history." Some day they'd like to restore the house for historical reasons, she said.

The current barn at Howcrest farm dates to 1866 and was built by John and Elizabeth Harnish. The stone bearing that information is on the wall in the milkhouse.

The barn was remodeled in the 1960s by Mallery Frey Jr., and the stalls and manger are still in good shape. However, a 2-inch milking sysem was installed since.

Also of interest at Howcrest, a 15-acre pasture is across the street from the barn. It has a small pond and a stream running through it. The pond has been fenced off from cattle since the second year the Howards have been there, in order to minimize the risk of mastitis and for other sanitary dairy concerns.

At the same time, the pasture was divided into two. John said he allows the cows to feed in one of the pastures for a time and then he mows the other one, baling the grass for use as bedding. Then he switches fields, allowing the cows to pasture in the cut pasture, while he mows the pasture they cows started in.

Using the pasture is an attempt to maximize the cost effectiveness of feed. Sometimes the cows seem to drop a little on pasture in the spring. He pastures them during the day in the spring and fall, during the night during the summer and he allows the cows to use the barnyard excercise lot everyday.

The lot, or barnyard also has several calf hutches on it and the Howards raise all their heifer calves. Ideally, he said he'd like to wait until after the heifers freshen before he decides whether a heifer will become a permanent part of the string.

However, he said he has sold a few before he wanted to, when the offer was right.

John said that as far as conducting business, income derived from selling stock for breeding reasons constitutes anywhere from 25 percent to 40 percent of the total farm income. And he said that with milk prices so low, the income from selling genetic stock has increased percentage wise and has become even more important.

While the Howards have owned three grade cows, they are committed to registering animals. "We used the grades for recipients of embryos. It doesn't cost any more to feed or raise a registered animal," John said.

As far as feeding, John doesn't have a total mixed ration, but they do feed a balanced diet and test their feeds regularly.

The farm doesn't have a lot of silo storage, so John keeps some corn silage bagged, although he has to be careful with the plastic because of the many ways the seal can be broken allowing air to spoil the feed.

He said he tried haylage in the bags also, but he is going to try to avoid making haylage this year, since it's easier to feed baled hay and its less time and labor consuming. Otherwise, he has to make a lot of trips with a cart between the bagged feed and the barn.

service in 1936 and the family lost their seven-generations-owned Wedlitz Farm there to Nazi takeover. In 1952, he emigrated to the United States and became manager at Fox Lease Farms in Virginia. Under Haberland's guidance, Fox Lease gained national recognition for its fine-bred registered Holsteins.

Ted, Jr., and Diane returned to Fox Lease following their marriage in 1983 to handle the 1,000 acres of crops. When Ted, Sr. retired in 1986, the young couple went to work on a Mt. Joy dairy farm pursue their interest in farming.

Eighteen months later, they purchased a small dairy farm in Berks County and began milking 30 cows, including a core of 15 head owned from Ted's 4-H career. Within a year they received an "irresistable" offer from a buyer who wanted the farm. Through a Lancaster Farming ad, they located their present Thomasville R1 operation, formerly owned by Claude "Bud" Holmes.

"So we're in a new venture with an old friend," grins Ted of the canola planting which has so fascinated the neighborhood. "Dad's up every couple of weeks and has been watching it grow. It's been a big kick for him."

The 25 acres were planted to the tiny, round, black canola seeds last August 25, after silage corn was harvested. Soil tests called for 50 pounds nitrogen, 60 each of phosphorus and potash and 5 of sulphur per acre.

"Canola is such a small seed that it needs to be handled like alfalfa in preparing a seedbed," Ted explains. And, while European growers have specialized canola seeders, Haberland had to improvise.

After chisel plowing, the seedbed was disked and cultipacked twice. A grain drill, minus the hoses in front of the drill disks, was used to direct seed the canola at the rate of 6 pounds per acre. After seeding, the bed was cultipacked once more for good seed-to-soil contact.

In about a week, the seedlings, "looking like little tiny bow-ties" were up, ideally six to ten plants per square foot. By late October, the Haberlands were pleased with the stand, which turned a brilliant crimson in fall's chilly temperatures.

"Early planting seems to be a key to a good stand," Haberland believes. "Canola has a tap root that needs to develop. There's not much heighth in the fall, just leaves and tap root. It should have 10 to 12 leaves per crown to be ready to go into winter, when the tops completely die off. And it cannot take wet spots; canola must good winter drained soils."

By early May, the sunny yellow blooms atop the five-foot stem covered the fields with color and kept the local honeybee population working overtime. Dozens of tiny, fingerlike pods, already filling with the pin-head-size seeds, protruded off branches from each main stem.

The Haberlands frequently host European visitors, including youth exchangees. They've praised the stand, and marvel at the lack of pests on it. Lack of cold winters in growing areas there encourage insect and fungus infestations.

"Dad has told us that with a good canola crop you should be able to pull on a plant at one edge of the field and it should shake at the other edge," Haberland observes of the crop's tendency to tangle together into a thick mass of growth. "And a crop with decent yields should start to lay over as it matures.

"We like to plant a fall grain for generating early summer cash flow and then double crop corn or soybeans," adds Haberland. "But we didn't really need the straw from barley and canola matures earlier for double cropping. We'll probably follow it with beans."

The Thomasville dairyman plans to harvest the canola with a soybean head, in early June. Seed moisture should ideally be at nine percent at harvest for the highest concentration of oil and to prevent rancidity. Haberland, Sr. has cautioned the couple that all harvest and hauling equipment must be as free as possible of leaks and cracks.

"Dad says that if trucks or equipment won't hold water, they won't hold canola, either," Haberland says of the fine seed.

"You can handle the seed and actually feel the oil from it," he says of this oil-rich crop. Promoted as one of the healthiest vegetable oils, canola oil is seeing increased use for frying by consumer-health-conscious fast food chains.

"Canola oil is available in some local supermarkets," notes Diane, who has taken to reading cooking oil labels in search of marketers of the product.

According to Haberland, canola protein meal has tremendous livestock feeding characteristics as an oilseed by-product. However, due to its expense, he figures alternatives as more economical.

The recent opening of Iron Curtain countries to increased world trade has been a factor, Haberland believes, in making canola varieties available that will tolerate area winter temperatures.

"Poland had the strains of those seeds," he adds. "Before leadership changes in Poland and the opening of the country, they weren't available here."

The Haberlands credit York Agway for assistance in locating a supply of seed for planting. Andgrow was instrumental in contracting the crop to Albright's Mill in Kempton.

Running an input cost analysis, Haberland tallyed slightly over $90 per acre of planting and harvest costs. That included six pounds of seed at $2.72 per pound, $35.50 of fertilizer, $10 for tillage and $30 harvest and trucking. And, while his father recalls yields of 35 bushel per acre, prior to commercial fertilizer usage and with old seed varieties, Haberland hopes for at least a 50-bushel yield and a $5/bushel price. Price per bushel, he says, usually runs somewhat parallel that of soybeans.

While the canola was in final ripening stages, the Haberlands were filling their forage silo with another less familiar silage crop, triticale.

"It gives more tonnage than barley and is ready later than rye. Our heavy soils just won't support equipment most years early enough to chop rye. It gives us a ten-day harvest window, and can head out and still give a 18-20 percent feed," Haberland adds. Last year's triticale silage yielded six tons dry matter per acre. Corn or beans follows the forage crop.

"We like to try new things," agree the Haberlands. "We don't necessarily need to be first, but we don't want to be the last."

The Haberlands enjoy sharing their experience with these locally lesser known crops and are willing to talk with other farmers considering planting them. They may be reached at New Wedlitz Farm, Thomasville R1, 17364, phone 717-259-8406.

Nearly lost in the five-feet-tall canola are from left, Beth, 6; Theo, 5; and Elsa, 3; the Haberland youngsters.

Diane and Ted Haberland examine the developing seed pods on the canola stand.

Local Dairy Farmers Help "Lick Illiteracy" In Baltimore

TOWSON, MD — Baltimore's Inner Harbor was the site of the first "Lick Illiteracy" ice cream fest sponsored by the dairy farmers of the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association (MAMMA) and the Southeast United Dairy Industry Association (SUDIA). All proceeds benefitted Baltimore's literacy program, Baltimore Reads, Inc.

For the thousands of visitors to Inner Harbor, it was all the ice cream you could eat, on Saturday, May 25. Ice cream was provided by Lee's Ice Cream, Jack & Jill Ice Cream and Friendly's Ice Cream. Maryland State Dairy Princess Stacey Guyton and Pennsylvania's State Dairy Princess Kristin Metzker, along with county dairy princesses from both states, served ice cream from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

"Lick Illiteracy" was the first of MAMMA's summer ice cream promotions designed to increase consumers' awareness of the wholesome goodness of ice cream and frozen yogurt.

The fifth annual "Everyday Is Sundae", held on Philadelphia's Independence Mall, is scheduled for Wednesday, June 26, 11 a.m. Harrisburg and Reading will be the site of MAMMA's first mini-festivals to be held during the Harrisburg Senators game, Friday, June 14 and during the Reading Phillies' game on Sunday, June 23, to 2 p.m. Local county dairy promotion groups will be serving giant sundaes to fans at the Hagerstown Suns game, Friday, June 21 and at the Frederick Keys' game, Friday, June 7.

Maryland and Pennsylvania state and county dairy princesses dipped and scooped for seven hours during the Baltimore ice cream fest held Saturday, May 25, to kick-off June as Dairy Month and to benefit Baltimore's literacy program. Pictured are: Stacey Guyton, Maryland State Dairy Princess; Jacy Clugston, Lancaster Co. Dairy Princess; and Cindy Fell, Cecil County Dairy Princess.

MAMMA advertises and promotes milk and dairy products for more than 5,000 dairy farm families of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, Virginia and West Virginia.

Stacy Guyton, Maryland's State Dairy Princess enlisted some help from Cal Ripken, Jr. at Baltimore's Inner Harbor over Memorial Day Weekend. Ms. Guyton really did most of the talking to tell visitors about "Lick Illiteracy", the ice cream fest sponsored by the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association and the Southeast United Dairy Industry Association to benefit Baltimore's literacy program and to kick-off June as Dairy Month.

Molly Moo and Susan Summers, Maryland Dairy Princess Director, hand out "I Love Milk" stickers to thousands of visitors to Baltimore's Inner Harbor over Memorial Day weekend and direct them to "Lick Illiteracy", the ice cream festival sponsored by MAMMA and SUDIA, to benefit Baltimore's literacy program and to remind consumers of the deliciousness and wholesome goodness of ice cream.

AGRIMERICA Holds Annual Meeting

GREENE, N.Y. — The second annual meeting of the Milk Producers Voluntary Agricultural Association, now known as ACRIMERICA, was held recently in Greene, N.Y., which is in Chenango County.

Presiding at the meeting was Cathryn Buck, association administrative manager. Special guests were John Pollock, executive director of the Rural Health & Safety Council, and Richard Bucci, director of communications from the office of state Sen. Thomas W. Libous of Binghamton, N.Y.

Pollock presented two demonstrations on hazard decision-making and assessing the risks in a hazard situation. He said the importance should be stressed of knowing the hazard, and making the proper assessment in deciding on whether the risks of the hazard out-weigh the value of the hazard.

He said it should be emphasized that the goal is to eliminate the hazard if at all possible. If unable to limit the hazard, then try to prevent any risks related to the hazard, he said.

Pollock's represented The NYS Rural Health & Safety Council Inc., a non-profit organization which strives to educate and inform the farm community and public on farm safety and prevention.

Richard Bucci presented an update on Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) legislation.

He explained that the trend in rural communities is to rely on people who volunteer their services, either as firemen or EMT's. But because of the time and training it takes, and the lack of funding through the state for services, the number of people volunteering for these services is dwindling.

Therefore, there are several bills being discussed in the legislature to help overcome this problem. Some of these include:

- A bill to provide low-interest loans to rural communities for purchasing the necessary equipment for EMFs and fire departments;
- A bill to change the re-certification of EMT's from 3 years to 5 years;
- A bill which would give judges the option of assessing the cost of emergency medical services against persons who are convicted of DWI, DWAI, or driving under the influence of a drug;
- A bill sponsored in the senate which would create a tuition program for EMT's taking courses needed for certification and re-certification. This bill would require the state to pay the tuition for EMT's who successfully complete the courses and then use their training in the community.

Bucci said there is a strong need to keep rural medical services available in the state, since, at times, these are the only lifesaving services available.

Following these two presentations, Francis Meehan, president of AGRIMERICA, gave his annual report. He said the association is important and also needs to grow.

The association was re-organized in 1989, when the board of directors realized that farmers and other agribusiness people had needs that went beyond the realm of health coverage. The membership also needed concrete programs and services that could cater to their unique position as agriculturists.

Because of this new focus, AGRIMERICA now gives members the opportunity to benefit from other health and safety programs, and educational opportunities.

This has also meant that the board of directors will be growing from three to five directors.

Meehan also announced that AGRIMERICA is to have an exhibit at the upcoming Empire Farm Days and at Ag Progress Days in Pennsylvania, both in August.

Buck presented her annual report to the members.

"A new name, a broader program base and a concentration on the financial stability of the dairy industry," as well as health and safety issues, have been focal points for the association and its board members, she said.

"The Association is dedicated to the principles and rewards of agriculture, and it continues to allow agribusiness owners and their employees to enjoy the unique benefits of fast, friendly service, and a variety of money-saving opportunities," Buck said.

Buck said she summarized the past year in that the association is striving to satisfy the needs and wants of its members in as many ways as possible.

AGRIMERICA offers a newsletter called Pipeline published every other month. It is sent to association members to keep them abreast of what is going on in the industry.

Another new offering is a quarterly health and safety letter for its members called "AgGuidance."

The association also endorses agriculturally beneficial legislation which aims to help its members.

Members also present testimony when needed, to help their farmer members whenever possible.

Pat Kearse and Barbara Kane gave an update on Corporate Care Management. The CCM is an out-of-the-ordinary firm which assists health care participants in containing health care costs. CCM has 20 nurses on staff who offer help in health care benefits and problems. Their service is part of the Milk Producers Health and Welfare Trust, the Medical Care Plan sponsored by AGRIMERICA.

Special recognition was given to

A Plan For Pseudorabies Eradication

AMY J. NESSELRODT, DVM
USDA Veterinary Medical Officer

An Open Letter To Pennsylvania Pork Producers

Dear Pennsylvania Pork Producer:

I am the Federal Veterinarian with USDA, APHIS, Veterinary Services who has been assigned to work with the PA Pseudorabies Advisory Committee. Recently, we have been drawing up our plans for how we are going to eradicate Pseudorabies Virus from PA hogs. Presently, it is our goal to have every quarantined herd signed up for a herd plan.

A herd plan is an individual "road map" of how each producer will work to remove Pseudorabies from his herd and thus get off of quarantine. A herd plan is selected based on the type of operation, the facilities, the value of the bloodlines, the disease profile of the herd, the number of pseudorabies positive animal in the herd, the use of vaccination, the commitment and management ability of the personnel, and other factors.

I plan to mail a packet of information to each quarantined producer in early June and begin visiting them on a one-on-one basis a few weeks later. I will not be entering the animal facilities. I plan on beginning with the herds most recently put on quarantine and working my way down the list. Each herd plan I write will then be sent to the herd veterinarian for his or her approval before it is considered complete. Even then it will not be considered the "final word" but will be subject to change if needed.

Hopefully we can all work together and getting Pseudorabies out of our PA hogs will no longer be just a dream but it will become a realistic goal. I am excited about this program and I look forward to receiving your support.

Sincerely,
Amy J. Nesselrodt, DVM
Veterinary Services

The Pennsylvania Pseudorabies Advisory Committee is moving forward in its plans to eradicate Pseudorabies virus (PRV) from Pennsylvania hogs. The goal is to have each producer put on a written herd plan. The herd plan will be chosen to fit the needs of the individual producer with the assistance of Dr. Amy Nesselrodt, pseudorabies coordinator, and the producer's private veterinarian.

The first step is to set up a herd plan to determine the prevelance of PRV (or number of positive animals) in the herd. If the herd has been on quarantine for longer than six months and/or has been vaccinating for a period of time, it would be advisable to do a statistical test of the herd. There is a chance that the herd may already be free of the disease or it may only have a very small number of positive animals.

The next step is to choose from one of the basic Livestock Conservation Institute (LCI) herd plans and to modify the plan according to the needs of the individual producer. The first plan is called "Phased Test and Removal". This can be done with or without vaccination, though there is an increased risk of reinfection if vaccination is not used. The advantage of this plan is that it minimizes interruption of pig flow. The disadvantage of this plan is that positive pigs stay in the herd longer, and can be a source of reinfection. The plan calls for testing the breeding herd and a sample of the finishers, then vaccinating the entire herd. Positive boars are removed immediately and positive sows are removed either after weaning or as soon as possible. They are then replaced with negative vaccinated gilts. After a turnover of the known positive animals has occurred, the herd should be retested and then state regulations should be followed for quarantine removal.

Another plan, "Immediate Test and Removal", can be very successful when 20% or less of the herd is infected, and there is no infection in the grower or finisher pens. In this case, all the positive animals are removed to slaughter or a quarantined feedlot. The entire herd is then vaccinated. A month after the positive hogs have been removed from the herd, a statistical sample of the breeding animals and their offspring over 16 weeks of age are tested. If the test is negative, then state regulations should be followed to get the herd off of quarantine.

"Offspring Segregation" is a useful plan in herds where at least 6 months have past since a clinical outbreak of PRV has occurred and/or in herds that have subclinical infections. There are a couple variations of this method but the basic idea is to wean new gilts off the sow before they have a chance to become infected. Then the gilts are raised in isolated facilities. Before vaccinated gilts are moved into the regular nursery or grower pens, the areas will have to be free of positive hogs and cleaned and disinfected. This method is labor and space intensive but works well.

The last basic type of herd plan is not a popular option and that is "Depopulation\Repopulation". Due to the cost and down time involved, this is not a method most producers will choose. However, in some cases it can be profitable, such as in a herd where a lot of other disease problems are present or in a herd that needs to improve its genetic base.

Along with any basic herd plan chosen, biosecurity issues and management factors must be addressed. Biosecurity issues include, but are not limited to, footbaths, limited visitor access, wildlife exposure, traffic on and off the farm, people and pig flow, and handling of purchased additions. New additions should be isolated for 21-30 days and should be both tested and vaccinated for PRV before they are added to the herd. Management factors to be addressed include vaccination, the facilities, swine handling, moving to all in/all out, etc. It is important to remember that vaccination is not a "cure all". Vaccine is helpful to decrease or eliminate clinical signs of the disease and it helps decrease the amount of virus shed. Vaccine however does not prevent entry of virus into the herd nor totally prevent spread within an infected herd. With the development of the differential vaccine, it is one of our best tools as long as the limits are understood.

Most Lancaster County herds will probably employ vaccination with phased test and removal. While perhaps the most realistic method for these producers, it is also not without some risk due to possible circulation of virus within the herd. Therefore, it is important to keep goals realistic, stay flexible, and practice all forms of biosecurity. Area spread of PRV is always possible as long as there are infected herds in PA, but if everyone works together at the same time to get cleaned up, the chance of success will be much greater.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 2

EXCELLENT WEEK FOR FIELDWORK: Hot and humid conditions over most of the state finally came to an end as a cold front moved south through the state during the end of the week. An unseasonable warm air flow pushed temperatures into the upper 80's and lower 90's for most of the week. Respondents to our survey indicated that 6 days were suitable for field work. Activities for the week included repairing fence, hauling manure, harvesting hay and haylage, maintaining machinery, spring plowing, planting crops, and caring for livestock.

SOIL MOISTURE: Pennsylvania's top soil moisture was rated short by 71 percent of our respondents. Twenty-eight percent of the respondents rated soil moisture as adequate and 1 percent indicated a surplus. In the northern region, 61 percent rated it short, 36 percent rated it adequate, and 3 percent rated it surplus. In the central region, 80 percent of our respondents rated soil moisture short and 20 percent rated it adequate. In the southern region, 71 percent of our respondents rated soil moisture short, 28 percent rated it as adequate, and 1 percent rated it surplus.

PLOWING: Ninety-seven percent of the spring plowing was completed by week's end. Last year at this time, 92 percent was completed and the five-year average was 94 percent. Completion of spring plowing was 97, 98, and 97 percent in the northern, central, and southern regions, respectively.

CORN: By the end of the week, 90 percent of the state's corn crop was planted. Last year at this time, 71 percent was planted. The five-year average was 74 percent. Planting completion by region were: northern region — 87 percent; central region — 91 percent; and southern region — 93 percent.

SOYBEANS: The state's soybean planting was 67 percent complete by week's end. As of this date last year, 33 percent was planted, and the five-year average was 41 percent.

OATS: Pennsylvania's oat planting was complete at the end of the week. Last year, that figure was 97 percent and the five-year average was 98 percent planted. The oats crop was rated 20 percent excellent, 51 percent good, 23 percent fair, 5 percent poor, and 1 percent very poor.

POTATOES: According to our respondents, 95 percent of Pennsylvania's potatoes were planted. Last year 82 percent was planted and the five-year average was 86 percent.

BARLEY AND WHEAT: The state's barley crop progress, by the end of the week, was 7 percent pre-boot, 8 percent boot and 85 percent heading. Last year's numbers were 14, 18, and 68 percent, respectively, for pre-boot, boot, and heading. The five-year average was 13 pre-boot, 12 percent boot, and 75 percent heading. Wheat progress was 6 percent pre-boot, 14 percent boot, and 80 percent headed. Last year's progress was 12, 27, and 61 percent, pre-boot, boot and headed, respectively. The five-year average was 13, 25, and 62 percent, respectively. The wheat crop was rated 23 percent excellent, 54 percent good, 18 percent fair, 4 percent poor, and 1 percent very poor.

AGRIMERICA

Harris has served with the group since 1972, and is one of the founding members of the association.

The employer members voted on a new amendment to the association bylaws — increasing the number of the members of the board of directors from three to five.

The amendment was passed and is to take effect at the 1992 annual meeting.

In other business, employer members also voted on new directors.

Those elected were Francis Meehan, dairy farmer from Rexville, N.Y. (one of the Association founding members) president; Douglas Marshall Jr., dairy farmer from Pratts Hollow, N.Y., (founding member) board member; and Bennett Young, dairy farmer from East Smithfield, Pa., board member.

AGRIMERICA is a non-profit, multi-state association administered and supervised by a board of directors elected by association employer members involved in agricultural pursuits.

There are four mission statements of the association, which are: To encourage the continuing success of agribusiness throughout America; to promote the good health and financial security of persons engaged in agriculture; to inform its members about what is happening in agriculture that affects them; and to offer discounts to its members on business travel, family vacations and association-sponsored trips.

The association has nearly 5,000 members throughout New York, Pennsylvania and Vermont.

In New York State alone, over 3,600 agribusiness individuals and families participate in the association and its programs. Of those pver 3,600 agriculturists, approximately 3,100 are dairy farmers.

Susquehanna River Commission Proposes Water Use Fees For Farming Operations

als was held late last month in the commission's offices in Harrisburg. Richard Kreider, Manheim, was the only farmer present.

"When I became award of this proposal, I became concerned because none of the farmers I contacted knew about this proposal," Kreider said. "Potentially, anyone who uses water in a commercial or agricultural operation would be liable to the fees and consumption control by the commission."

Kreider said that at the hearing many questions about farming operations could not be answered. Questions such as: What fines would be charged if non-compliance was discovered? Who would investigate the compliance requirements? Are present farming operations included, so that a farmer who uses water would become responsible to obtain a permit to continue operation?

Michael Brubaker, a private agronomy consultant from Lititz said that a major concern with this proposal is that it puts regulation where we never had regulation before. "What are the impacts for expansion of agriculture?" Brubaker asked. "How easy will it be to lower the minimums so that more farmers are covered by the regulation?"

Both Brubaker and Kreider urge farmers to contact the commission to ask questions about their farm operation and to make written comments immediately so they can be in time for the commission's consideration.

The person to contact in Harrisburg is Richard Cairo, commission secretary, Susquehanna River Basin Commission, 1721 N. Front Street, Harrisburg, PA 17102-2391. Phone: (717) 238-0423.

He lost six weeks during harvest and now his friends call him lucky.

It could have been worse, all he lost was time. If another accident happens, he might not be so fortunate. Take a few extra minutes and follow all directions found in the operator's manual and the safety decals for your farm equipment. Plan your future around safety, not the whims of Lady Luck.

WARNING: Guards, covers and grates provide protection from moving parts which could otherwise be exposed. If they are not in place, your life or the lives of your loved ones may be in danger. Before using any farm equipment, you should study, understand and comply with the operator's manual. You should also make sure other operators also understand how to safely operate the equipment. Decals placed on equipment provide important safety and operating instructions which you should always follow.

We care about your safety.

Sunshine, Rain Sprout Potatoes, Love At Keener Farm

The Keener family from left: Willie, Moses, Jonathan, Joshua, and Barb stand with the sign that points to the H. K. Potato Farm.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — J. Williard Keener is keeping a close eye on his potato fields these days. So far, 1991 appears to be a good crop year. While many areas have been hot and dry, the Keener potato fields have had several heavy rains.

"Sunshine and rain make the potatoes grow," Keener said.

Crops aren't the only thing that grows from sunshine and rain. Keener and his wife Barb find marriage relationships are enhanced through joys and disappointments in life.

In February, Barb was the winner in the county Pennsylvania Farmers' Association Sweetheart Contest. She penned the following words to describe "love" that has blossomed a 10 year marriage and produced three sons, Jonathan, 6; Joshua, 4; and Moses, 20 months.

HOW DO I SPELL LOVE?

It's saying your clothes are shrinking when they seem to be getting tight.

It's washing out diapers for me when I've fallen behind.

It says "you're gorgeous," when I just looked in the mirror and thought my hair needs washing.

It's encouraging me to try something different, letting me make an investment, and taking time off to help set up.

It's saying it wasn't that bad when I've failed.

It's taking two little boys in the "big truck" to give me a break.

It's staying out in the car with three little boys while I run in and out of stores.

It's praying for things that are on my mind.

It's gentle, kind, faithful and slow to anger

It's Willy!

Barb said writing the winning entry was easy because she had a good subject.

A happy marriage is a priority for the Keeners.

"You can't have a good marriage without a commitment," Keener said.

The couple are so adament of this principal that in their wedding vows they said, "May God deal with us severly if any thing but death would part us."

While the couple said that similar backgrounds and expectations coupled with the strength of both sets of their parents' marriages built a good foundation, they know that marriage sometimes causes disagreements.

Keener's advice at these moments are "Don't be afraid to go for counseling. Go early. It is better not to wait until disaster hits."

Barb agreed.

She emphasized that having a personal relationship with the Lord is a big plus in marriage. She said, "When I don't have the answer, I can pray and God will help. God has wisdom we don't have. He can change things that we think are impossible to change."

When first married, the Keeners spent eight months in missionary work in Texas, Colorado, and Mexico under the auspices of Youth With A Mission. Barb taught at an Hopi Indian reservation for her student teaching when she graduated from Millersville University.

When the Keeners returned to Lancaster County, Barb taught at Lititz Mennonite School while Willie joined his dad, Harold, and two brothers, Steve and Jeff, in a potato farming partnership. The Keeners grow from 20 to 75 acres of potatoes annually.

While they does not sound like a big farming operation, it is misleading as the partnership buys potatoes from local farmers and from Maine to Florida in order to meet the demands of local supermarkets and restaurants.

"We buy one to two tractor trailer loads every week," Keener said. The company bags the potatoes and markets most of them under the brand name of H.K. Potatoes.

The Keeners also have a hog finishing barn with 1,000 head of hogs. They grow corn and soybeans on 75 acres and rent an additional 20.

So far this year, the Keeners did not need to use irrigation, but they are prepared with a pump and traveler wheel that has one gun and a flexible hose for irrigation.

Too dry weather hurts the yield, too wet causes rot or quality problems. Potatoes thrive best with lots of sunshine but not too hot, with cool evenings and good rains.

Planting begins in early April. "Each spring I can hardly wait to get into the fields to plant," Willard said.

An automatic cutter is used to cut seed potatoes or B-size potatoes are planted. "They cost a little more, but the stalk is more sturdy and even," Keener said.

Weeds are sprayed and the ground is cultivated during the growing season. This year the Colorado potato beetle, the most fierce potato pest, is kept under control with a combination of Viodate and Thiodin. Seven is used to control the corn bore.

Harvesting begins at the end of July or the beginning of August. The digging begins in early morning hours before the day is too hot.

Workers separate the stones and dirt from the potatoes that are loaded on the bulk trucks. The potatoes are graded, washed, dried, and stored in a a cooler set at 50 degrees.

"Once the heat is out of the potatoes, the potatoes stay cool in air conditioned storage," Keener said.

The Keeners put air conditioning in in 1980.

"Air conditioning solves a lot of problems and is worth the investment," Keener said. "Supermarkets are more particular with quality than they used to be, and this helps maintain quality throughout the year."

Bulk storage also offers a supply for winter months. According to Keener, growers in this area are thinning out. Prices fluctuate.

The Keeners also sell out of their own warehouse, but find there is less demand for potatoes in the summer since many people have their own gardens.

Marketing is done mostly by word of mouth. Supermarkets talk to other supermarket managers and contact the Keeners about supplying them with potatoes. The independent farmers like it that way and don't have a desire to get bigger.

"Potatoes are a big investment and it is easier to make a profit by shipping than by raising all the potatoes," Keener said.

The Keeners think it is advantageous to raise a dual crop such as potatoes and pigs. They do not feed potatoes to the pigs. In addition to their finishing operation, the Keeners have a sow herd on another farm. They are in the process of switching to PIC breeding stock.

Unfortunately 1988 turned out to be a bad year to raise both hogs and potatoes. Many of the potatoes rotted because the weather flunctuated between being too wet and too dry. Although good potatoes were mixed in with the rotted ones, it was too difficult to separate and the potatoes needed to be thrown away.

"Sometimes a setback or bad times can be good to show where to make changes," Keener said. "It teaches us to hold on less tightly. In farming, you can do everything right and things still do not work out. I think recognizing that helps me to relax more and take one day at a time."

Although you can't see the good when you are going through a bad time, Keener said, "The monetary investment in farming keeps you there when discouraged."

While the Keeners work to have potato quality superior or as good as the competition, they are careful to nurture their marriage as well. "It takes commitment to keep a marriage healthy and that's what we want," Barb said.

Barb, a former school teacher, spends a lot of time reading to the children.

These three brothers with mischief in their eyes keep things exciting in the Keener family.

Life On Moser Brothers' Century Farm

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — Brothers William W. (Bill), and Harvey Moser, the only sons born to parents whose four older children were daughters, were delighted this spring to have the family farm named Moser Brothers officially designated a Century Farm. Until 1974, the farm was known as Ralph Moser & Sons.

Bill says he always thought that his ancestors purchased the farm in 1889 until he checked the deed and found the date was 1888.

The original farm, now the century farm, is comprised of 235 acres. Three more farms, purchased in succeeding years by the brothers, have increased their land holdings by 590 acres. Some land is rented to other farmers, much of it supports their own Holstein dairy with crops of hay, corn, and oats. Some parts of it aren't farmed.

Excluding replacement stock, the dairy operates with a fluctuating 75 head of milking animals, of which about one third are registered. For propagation of the herd they say that artificial insemination is generally used to impregnate the females. Milk from their dairy is marketed through the Maryland-Virginia Co-op.

"We have a cash crop of potatoes and maple syrup," says Harvey. Bill adds that these crops are comparatively small. For instance, the market potatoes are raised on one and a half acres.

When the Moser couples — Bill and wife Roberta, Harvey and wife Nancy — took time from their busy schedules for an interview, it was set for the dubious hour of 9:30 p.m. at Harvey's home. It had to follow a high school musical concert demanding their supportive presence and a foregone supper which normally would have followed the completion of evening milking chores. So, after arriving home, Nancy quickly ordered pizza from a local shop, "So Harvey can have his supper," she said.

We were right on schedule, but the two gentlemen, having already done a good day's work, looked increasingly comfortable in their easy chairs waiting for the kids to bring home the pizza. Was it really a good time for an interview, I wondered.

Shown are the Moser brothers standing by the peony flower bed with their wives. From left, Nancy and Harvey Moser and Roberta and William W. Moser, from Meyersdale, RD 3.

Initially, the questions were met with a fair amount of cogitation before Harvey gave one answer, Bill gave a different one, and finally, the wives gave the one they knew to be correct.

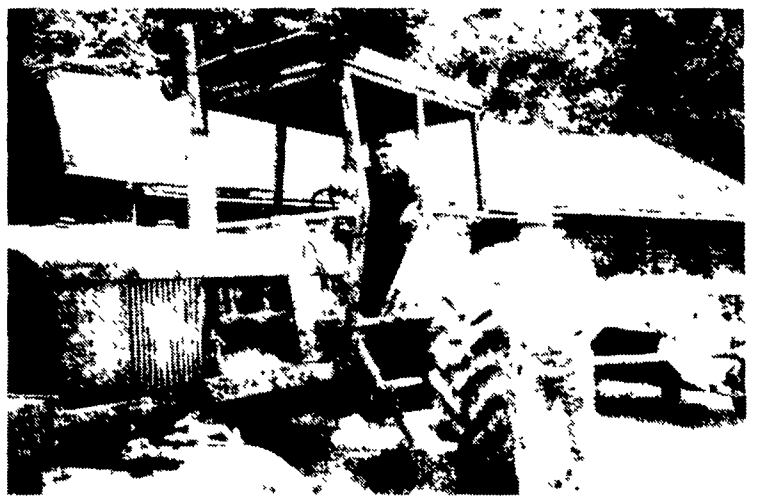
Harvey said he learned to milk by hand as a young boy.

"I've been milking cows for fifty years," he said.

The previous generation used horses for farming but slowly machinery replaced them until the horses weren't used at all. The first milking machines came to the farm during the 1940 decade.

Bill chuckles as he tells how it

(Turn to Page B5)



Moser Brothers, Bill on the big John Deere tractor, and Harvey, standing by the rear tire, are now the owners of a Century Farm.

Somerset County correspondent, Gay N. Brownlee, has been a part-time professional writer for five years. With her six children now fully grown, she intends to pursue her passion for writing much more vigorously.

Recently, Brownlee was made an honorary member of the Old Petersburg-Addison Hisotrical Society, located in Addison, PA, on the strength of a single story she wrote telling how the society was restoring an abandoned cemetery, which was buried under a labyrinth of trees, tangled brambles, and wild berry vines. The cemetery's graves were sunken from decayed wooden coffins and had damaged tombstones from unrestrained cattle.

Besides writing, Brownlee reads, teaches a teenage Sunday School class, enjoys homemaking, and is a volunteer for the Mountain Playhouse, a professional summer theatre located at Jennerstown, Pa.

In the near future, Brownlee has plans to travel and to study creative writing.

Moser Brothers'

went for the two stripplings to master the tractor driving. It was difficult, he said, to reach the clutch, and when they tried, they slid out of the tractor seat.

Like most kids back then, they tried their skill at aiming a stream of warm milk straight from the cow's teat into the cat's mouth, while perched on the one-legged stool by her side. "It took awhile for the cat to know what it was all about," grins Harvey, the younger brother.

Bill says he clearly remembers that he was the one who always fell asleep doing his hand-milking task, then fell off the stool. He says he was soon given a job he could do better.

Installation of the first bulk milk tank on the farm came in 1964. They say that a machine called a "Sputnik," was used to transfer the milk to the bulk tank. Sputnik held some 300 pounds of milk and could be wheeled from the stalls to the bulk tank. It was repeated until the milking was finished, then it was thoroughly cleaned with a brush, hot water and detergent. The installation of a modern pipeline system in 1983 is still used and has streamlined the twice daily milking routine.

Many years ago, a street car line cut through the rural area, passing by the Moser farm on its way through the various small towns. Bill says the streetcar stopped at the farm to pick up cans of milk and cream. He was too young to recall where it was taken or how it was kept cold.

When a former railroad line also went near their farm, Mosers say they lost six cattle because of an unwise decision by the railroad officials. Rather than mow the weeds choking the rail bed, the decision was made to spray them with a poison. The potent substance took their cattles' lives, including the lead cow, a Brown Swiss. Some compensation was made for the loss of cattle by the railroad they said.

Harvey says he does the milking chores through the week, then he and Bill alternate doing the task on Sundays. Help with the farm work comes from Harvey's son, Jeff, and a high school boy.

Moser Brothers' cattle are grain-fed twice daily and turned out for exercise for four hours each day. Nancy says there is a great difference in the hooves of cows which are confined inside. She said they can grow long and curl, whereas, cattle roaming outside have the advantage of the conditioning and filing as a natural sequence. Harvey says it is sometimes necessary to grind the hooves if they become too long.

These typically busy farm wives hold outside jobs. Nancy is completing her 25th year of elementary school teaching. She and Harvey have three children and five grandchildren. Roberta and Bill have three children and four grandchildren. She has an office position at a local car dealership.

The very social Moser clan is an inherently musical family from the vocal to the instrumental talent. Harvey sings and directs a men's chorus. Without hesitation, William says he loves singing solos and in quartets. Roberta is the retired church organist, but Nancy easily takes her place and plays the piano as well. their children are also musicians.

Beside their work and play, Nancy says they all spend about two weeknights at the church in addition to attending Sunday services, because of involvement in church affairs.

Bill, a deacon in the Meyersdale Church of the Brethren, says he enjoys helping with the annual Christmas pageant. He says it is a tradition having its beginning in 1939 and is always so well attended by the community that it's presented on two evenings.

During the annual Pennsylvania Maple Festival, held each spring in Meyersdale to celebrate the production of Somerset County's maple syrup which is renowned for its excellence, the Moser's help to present the pageant "Legend of the Magic Water." For many years this pageant has been featured several times during the week-long festival.

The brothers belong to the Meyersdale Young Farmers organization. According to the motto, "A young farmer is any farmer that's willing to learn," there's no age consideration.

Roberta says with artless humor, "these two don't qualify as young farmers, but they are willing to learn." Everybody laughs including her subjects.

The brothers were also members of the Future Farmers of America when young. Their progeny, following later, were also, then, and now, members of FFA and 4-H clubs, entering their animals in the annual county fair.

Harvey says rotational grazing for livestock seems to be a growing thing with farmers. Paddocks are used where animals graze clean one feed lot and are moved into the next one for grazing. Though Moser Brothers farm hasn't experimented with this method, they believe it is an option worth considering.

I just finished my sophomore year at Penn State, majoring in dairy and animal science.

This summer started off with my being in charge of the family farm for two weeks while my parents were in Germany. I will continue helping on the farm for the remainder of the summer.

We don't live on a farm, but have enough acreage to grow our own food. By the grace of God our freezer is always full until the end of summer. My husband came from a big farm family of 12, and they raised milk cows to supply their needs and to tend market with all the goodies that come from milk and butter. I was a city girl until I married 45 years ago. I have since become a very good cook and I have a following for my delicious chicken corn and salmon soups. I get many good recipes out of your section of Lancaster Farming. I am always proud to share a good recipe with our daughter who lives in Minnesota, knowing that someday she will be able to cook all the Pennsylvania Dutch dishes that I taught her.

We bought our 120-acre farm two years ago after a long prayerful search of 40 farms. Our farm name, Yahweh Dairy, comes from the Old Testament name for God, Yahweh, who led the Israelites through their 40-year prayerful search for their Promised Land. We milk about 35 Jerseys and Holsteins. All four of us are involved with showing Jerseys. Merideth and Nathan have 4-H cattle projects and sewing projects as well. The whole family, even grandparents, pitch in with the farm labor.

Last summer, I found this recipe in a magazine at a doctor's office while my daughter had four wisdom teeth cut out. I tried the recipe and my family likes it.

We are a turkey farm family with two children, Rebecca, 14, and Wendell, 11. My husband, Kenny, also hauls livestock and grain locally.

We have subscribed to Lancaster Farming for a long time. I only read the B section, but Kenny reads all the rest. We then pass on the paper to Kenny's uncle and aunt to read and enjoy.

1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 tablespoon instant coffee
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground cloves
1 pint vanilla ice cream

The enclosed recipe using three dairy products, milk, cream, and ice cream, is a nutritious and refreshing drink to serve anytime and is even fancy enough for parties when garnished. Of course, with the chocolate and coffee in it, it adds very tasty all-America

Ice Cream Is Hot

Syracuse, NY — Ice cream is a hot item in the freezer case but cool and delicious to the palate! To promote ice cream during July, which is National Ice Cream Month, the American Dairy Association (ADA), National Dairy Board (NDB) and Nabisco Brands, Inc. have joined forces to bring consumers a super scoop of a deal through the campaign, "There's Something About Ice Cream."

ADA installers have put up luscious-looking display materials in the supermarket frozen food aisles to tempt consumers into purchasing ice cream. Nabisco will also feature the free ice cream offer with similar materials in the cookie section and with end-aisle displays in the supermarket.

The ice cream promotion provides consumers with the opportunity to save on two favorite treats with one great offer in the Sunday July 14 coupon section of the newspaper. Buy two kinds of Nabisco cookies, using a 40 cents off coupon, and one half gallon of ice cream to receive a second half gallon free at the checkout counter (up to a $2 value). In-store tear pads will also feature a mail-in version of the same offer, doubling consumers' opportunity to save on their favorite summertime treats.

In addition to the retail promotion, network television and radio advertising during the months of July and August will remind consumers that "There's Something About Ice Cream."

Rambunctious Lambs Attract Crowds At Bedford

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — The first annual Bedford County Sheep and Wool Field Day was held at the Bedford Country Fairgrounds on Saturday, May 18.

Young people from the Young Shepherds, Shawnee Lakers, and Bedford Sheep Clubs sponsored a lot of fun events which had both young and older participants.

A Lamb Olympics was composed of an obstacle course and those in the game had to lead a lamb, sometimes rambunctious, through a maze of straw tunnels, under and over fences, and through rubber tires.

The categories included one celebrity race with Bedford County Commissioner Kim Coon; local plumbing business owner, Clair Knisely; Coach Room Restaurant owner, Bob Barnhart; and Bedford Mayor Jim Edwards being helped by 4-H members.

A lamb-dressing event followed with various age groups dressing sometimes patient and sometimes otherwise lambs with 13 odd pieces of clothing.

Local sheep shearer Karl Kaufman did a sheep shearing demonstration. Tom Culvert of Somerset spoke on rotational grazing and there were lamb spinning and dying demonstrations.

A highlight of the afternoon was a lamb cooking contest with Betty Slayton acting as the official judge. Lamb dishes prepared by area cooks were varied. When judged and set out for the public, the food disappeared quickly.

The day ended with a lamb judging contest and a market lamb sale.

"It was a big success, much better than we had hoped for," says Dick Dale of the Bedford County Extension Office. "It will definitely be repeated next year."

The sheep maze was set up in the fairgrounds where crowds gathered to watch teams lead their sheep through the maze.

Heather Schaeffer and her grandmother, Charlotte, placed first in one division of the lamb dressing contest. They are from the Friends Cove area of Bedford.

This girl dresses her lamb during competition.

Jake Schoonhoven of Lancaster and Stephen Sweet of Alum Bank share a baby lamb. The little girl in the last frame is Megan Keller.

Commissioner Kim Coon and his young helper Krista Myers of Bedford Valley work their way through the maze.

Visitors at the Bedford County Campgrounds enjoyed a spinning demonstration.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Though it has never been officially confirmed in any way, we've long suspected that the animals on this place are taking (have taken) over.

Consider that we fit our whole lifestyle around cows. We set the alarm for their early morning milking, juggle meals around the demands of their daily routine and drop anything we're doing at any time to rush to their emergency needs, like problem calvings.

We fetch grain in and haul manure out, stash away tons of forage and hand deliver it via chains, augers, and carts. Our nutritionists balance protein, energy, dry matter intake and minerals so that the cows probably eat a more balanced diet than most of the world's population. And, vets still make house, or barn calls to address the herd's health needs.

But it isn't just the cows that have taken over.

Our few remaining chickens and the five guineas have no production responsibilities, like laying eggs. Their purpose in life is to..... I'm not sure they have one, except to chase bugs in the meadow, roll in the sun-warmed dust and crow about it to the world.

The cats are supposed to patrol the barns for mice. Mostly they lounge around in soft straw and wait for their morning and evening rations of milk and food. On occasion, one might snag a mouse. Usually after I've moved a bale, spotted a mouse and rounded up the nearest snoozing cat.

Monk, the house cat is even worse. She'll chase a mouse but has no idea that her claws she uses to shred the stairway wallpaper have any other purpose. Lately she's taken to hiding upstairs just before bedtime, then sneaking onto the bed after we're sound asleep. Or, she'll scratch and whine at the door when her accurate inner clock senses that our morning wakeup and her food dish restocking are imminent.

And the two bunnies (yes, now we have TWO) do absolutey nothing but eat and sleep - and escape to hop around the yard at every opportunity. Given the reputation of rabbits, it's probably best if Ben (a female?) and Norman (with camouflage coloration) stick to eating, sleeping and an occasional game of hide-n-seek under the hosta leaves.

Pound for pound, though, no animal rules the roost around here any more than Solomon. Just another family member, equipped with four legs instead of two Solomon is the farm's self-appointed guardian, early warning groundhop alert system, visitor greeter, cow chaser, tomcat-fight referee, meadow patrolman, rides shotgun on the pickup and is a loving companion to all of us.

This pooch has his own toys, his own food and dishes, his own brush, his own skin allergy medications, his own pocket of health records rivaling those of the kids when they were little. And, now he gets mail.

The dog gets mail.

On a recent day, the mailman left a neatly-packaged container that at first glance looked like a shipment of blank checks. Until I spotted the addressee: Solomon Bupp. Complete with proper address and accurate ZIP code.

He's even been assigned a computer number - 005704903 391 S. Is that a driver's license (he does love vehicles)? He already had his own official, up-to-date dog license number and that's different. Social Security number? Nah, wrong groupings of numbers, spaces and no dashes.

And what does the "S" stand for? Sweetheart? He is one. Security guard? He takes that job very seriously. Or maybe "smelly" - which he definitely is after running through damp grass and then wanting to snuggle close. Phew!

Turned out the container had a sample of a "premium" dog food - to which the dog turns up his nose -, a questionnaire which doesn't have enough room in the check-off boxes for even a chihuahua-size paw print and a dollar-off coupon that he couldn't possibly redeem because supermarkets don't allow dogs inside.

Delivering an occasional piece of mail for the dog is apparently all part of a day's work for our rural mail carrier.

But I wonder. As the animals take over, is junk mail for cows the next step?

TAKING TIME

Pinching Pennies Pays

I am the kind of person who will pick up stray coins lying on the street. As a child I squirreled away the pennies in a bank on my dresser. I remember at college, it was a rare day that I did not recover some change as I walked to and from class.

No wonder I teach money management now!

Whether you're talking about the spare change you find in pockets while doing the laundry or about the dollars you indirectly save by making an informed purchase at a department store, pinching pennies pays.

This summer families will need to stretch the limited funds they have.

I imagine your farming community is much like that of the Lehigh Valley where the concems about finances closely shadow the weather charts. We know that our families' financial security depends on a good crop and decent market prices!

As individuals, we can do little to control the economy and the weather, but we can take steps to control the finances we already have. To help you make it through some of the lean times this summer, consider these money-stretching ideas.

Around the Home: May brought swelteringly high temperatures to Pennsylvania. To lower your utility bills, remember to pull shades to block sun from heating your home. Take advantage of cross-ventilation cooling by opening windows or doors at both ends of the house. However, in many older brick and stone homes, after a night of cooler temperatures, you may find it better to keep the house closed up to prevent cool air from escaping and warm air from entering.

Assess your bank accounts. Are you stretching your money by keeping most of it in accounts that earn interest? Many checking accounts offer interest. See if you could transfer some of your checking account money to a relatively liquid, but higher interest bearing category.

Interest rates are down. Now may be a good time to refinance bigger loans. You could save a substantial amount of money. Ask your banker for details. You can do this by phone. Call several places, and ask lots of questions.

Make it yourself. It's less expensive to make things like salad dressing, chocolate milk, and sugared cereals at home. You pay a lot of money for someone else to sprinkle on the sugar or stir in the flavor!

Drink water. Keep a jug in the refrigerator. This will cut down on the costs of other beverages, cut calories in your diet, and reduce utility costs (because people tend to run the tap a long time before drawing a glass of cold water).

Swap novels, children's toys, and exercise equipment with neighbors or friends to save money while still enjoying different ideas. Could you borrow a tent rather than renting one?

Collect aluminum cans along the road and redeem them for cash.

When Shopping: Write a list before you leave for the store, and stick to it. Don't buy fresh produce because it's a super price only to allow it to rot on your counter or in the crisper. Remember, freezer space may be limited as you begin to preserve your home-grown produce.

If you are looking for a particular item, do your comparison shopping by phone. Call several stores and ask if they stock the item and what the price is. This will save you time, energy, and gasoline. When you find the best deal, you'll also be saving dollars.

Yes, it's only pennies, but reuse your shopping bags. Some stores are now deducting several cents for each grocery bag that you reuse.

Do your shopping in one trip. Plan the trip on a day when you have doctor or dentist appointments. By making one less trip per week, the average family can save $100 in a year.

On Vacation: If you are a senior citizen (or in some cases over the "magic" age of 50 or 55), by all means inquire about discounts at restaurants, museums, fairs, and parks.

Particularly for day trips or weekend outings, pack your food. Eating at restaurants or from festival vendors can triple the cost of food!

Instead of buying souvenirs, send picture postcards to friends. Ask them to save them for you. At the end of your trip, you will have saved money on phone calls or letters, and you will have compiled a wonderful journal of your adventures without adding another dust-collecting knicknack.

Taking the time to stretch summer resources is definitely worth the dollars saved!

Woman Honored For Helping Low-Income Families

SCRANTON (Lackawanna Co.) — Betty Meholic, Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program(EFNEP) advisor in Lackawanna County, was recognized for 20 years of service with the Penn State Cooperative Extension Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program during the annual state EFENP meeting at University Park on April 29 and 30.

Mrs. Meholic reaches families with limited incomes through home visits and group meetings to teach basic nutrition concepts which improve the quality of lives for those involved.

In the program's 22 years, EFNEP has brought nutrition education to low-income families with young children throughout the state. More that 149,000 Pennsylvania families and 337,000 youth have been enrolled in EFNEP. This year, more than 8,000 families in 46 counties will be among over 600,000 families involved in the program nationwide.

Essential to the program are the nutritional education advisers and the county extension home economists who train them. More than 800 individuals have served as nutrition advisers since the program began in 1969. Thirteen of the current 105 advisers and three of the supervisors have been with the program since its beginning.

EFNEP nutrition advisers teach low-income families how to plan and prepare nutritious, low-cost meals. The EFNEP curriculum includes planning meals, storing food safely, using proper sanitation practices, shopping for food, buying with food stamps, budgeting food costs, gardening and preserving food. Participants also learn about other food programs and community resources.

For more information about EFNEP in Lackawanna County, contact the Penn State Cooperative extension office at 200 Adams Ave. Scranton.

Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas

ARE YOU A SAFE CANNER?

Home canning season is just about upon us for another season. Eating home-canned foods should be a healthy safe experience. And, if you follow the rules, it can be.

Safe canning involves a series of safety tips and checks. After all, food preservation is a science. And science is serious, but by not following the rules, you may be placing yourself, your family and your guests at serious risk.

As scientific knowledge about food safety continues to evolve, recommendations for home canning change; we know more today than ever before.

Unfortunately, from the phone calls I receive, I have learned that some long-time canners are skeptical of new canning procedures. Why? Because they have been doing things their way since grandmother's time without any problems.

These methods could have been dangerous even generations ago, but no one made the connection between illness and food.

Foods have changed, too. Growing conditions, use of pesticides and herbicides — all affect the chemical balance in produce. Science has also changed some of our favorite foods to meet today's tastes. Consider how many new types of corn and varieties of apples have been developed since grandmother's day. The chemical composition of these and other foods are different enough from the originals that old canning recipes simply do not always do the job.

How does this impact home canning? Well, one major recommendation is that all low-acid foods must be processed in a pressure canner to eliminate the risk of botulism, a potentially fatal bacterial toxin that can also cause muscular paralysis, vision problems and difficulty in breathing.

The lower the amount of acid a food contains, the higher its pH value. Low-acid foods include meats, seafoods, poultry, dairy products and all vegetables, except acidified tomatoes. Acidity prevents the growth of botulism.

Home canning today requires recipes developed today. You must follow current processing methods because they have been scientifically developed for safety.

If you need any more convincing, consider this serious true story: A faithful canner for 40 years was hospitalized near-death after tasting a batch of her home-canned vegetables, the vegetables she had processed the same way for 40 years without incident. What happened? She had been incorrectly canning her vegetables in a boiling water canner for 40 years; it was mere luck that she had not poisoned hundreds of people with her previously home canned food.

It CAN happen to you, especially if you say, I have been doing it this way all my life, and I've never had a problem!

So be a safe canner and always follow current USDA approved recommendations, such as those found in their Complete Guide To Home Canning book which is available at your County Extension Office.

Tour Showcases Beauty Of Lancaster's Gardens

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Whether you have a narrow yard or wide expanses of space, the proper design transforms the area into a garden of beauty.

The eighth annual Demuth Foundation Garden Tour, held last weekend among 15 Lancaster city and country homes, gave guests an opportunity to see the beauty perennial plants interspersed among shrubbery and magnificent trees provide.

Ferns and pachysandra thrived in shady parts while impatiens, begonias, lilies, and hostas added bursts of color. Window boxes and planters artfully arranged allowed color in areas where plants normally could not grow.

Patios at many of the sites showed how flagstone, cobblestone, weathered wood, brick or tile offered a relaxing retreat among the formal and informal gardens.

For those who did not participant in the garden tour, hints for making your own garden more appealing is possible if you follow these basic guidelines.

Garden Planning

1. Plan the border. Mix color to taste but be consistent. A border cannot be vivid on one end, pastel at the other and retain any logic or balance. Warm colors look closer, cool ones farther away, which allows the use of illusion for depth. Where many strong colors are to be used, muted foliage tones can temper the affect and improve the blend.

2. Start small.

3. Prepare the site thoroughly. Check with a garden center for recommendations on preparing the soil.

4. Make a plan before planting. Make overlays of tracing paper for each month of bloom.

5. Use simplicity, especially in small areas. Use an orderly arrangement of plant groups large enough to be restful and uncluttered, but with enough variety not to be monotonous or dull.

6. Balance is attractive and restful.

7. Unity is important and is best achieved by using repetitions of plant groupings or color groupings.

8. Tie into the surroundings by blending colors with nearby trees and shrubs. Use shrubs, a hedge, wall or fence where background is objectionable.

9. Use heights and shapes to produce depth and variety. Drifts of one variety create visual planes to work from, but they should not be large enough to be regular or monotonous.

10. Consider proportion. The mature height of the tallest plant should not exceed 60 percent of the borders width and mass.

A fence offers privacy and serves as a background for shrubbery. The patio uses a combination of brick and slate for easy care and durability.

Heights and shapes produce depth and variety. Drifts of one variety create visual planes to work from, but they should not be large enough to be regular or monotonous.

Slice an onion into rings and place over mixture. Top with chops. Cover and bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes.

My husband, Tom, and I farm in northern Berks County on a farm deeded by William Penn. We milk on the average 50 Holsteins and ship our milk to Hershey. I'm also an elementary school teacher. We have one son, Steven, who will start school this fall.

CHICKEN PARMESAN

1¼ cups corn bread stuffing
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 envelope Italian salad dressing
1 stick butter
1 frying chicken

Combine corn bread stuffing, cheese, and salad dressing in bowl, mixing well. Melt the butter in saucepan over low heat. Dip chicken pieces in butter, then roll in crumbs. Arrange, skin side up, in baking dish and sprinkle with remaining crumbs. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour, basting with drippings occasionally.

My husband, Darrell, and I operate a dairy farm near Middletown, Md. We milk approximately 60 head of Holstein cattle and raise between 40 to 50 heifers as dairy replacements. Our entire herd is registered.

We are the seventh generation of our family to farm in the Middletown Valley, a fact of which we are proud. Ours is a totally run family operation. Our three children, Darren, 12; Stephanie, 10; and Tara, 7; help out by feeding calves, and occasionally helping with the milking. Darren and Stephanie are both active in 4-H and are members of the Middletwon Valley Dairy Club. They enjoy showing their dairy projects and participating in dairy bowl and judging contests. Our family also enjoys sports and are active in our area youth sports programs, particularly soccer and baseball. We are members of St. Mark's Lutheran Church in Wolfsville.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

June is the month or roses. This year I bought a bush that has salmon-colored flowers. They are very pretty but I still like the single-petaled bright pink ones that grow without any attention behind our house.

My father-in-law had a big rose garden and he spent time and money on it. Someday my husband wants to grow roses too. We had an old-fashioned very thick petaled rose in our yard when we moved here some forty years ago. But it got too much shade and it was crowded out by day lilies. It was so fragrant and I'd like to find another like it.

It has been quite dry in our area and I've been carrying water to my begonias, impatiens, and petunias. The flower seeds that I planted have not come up and my tiny parsley was too tender and died under the hot rays of the sun. I replanted the parsley as it is one plant that I use a lot in cooking. As a result of the dry weather, my strawberries are not as big as they should be despite the fact that I laid a soaker hose on the rows.

There are three black cats and three kittens that live on my back porch. They depend on me to feed them but they also roam over the garden continually. This seems to keep the other animals out of the garden. Only a few strawberries were picked by the birds this year.

My iris were big and beautiful again this year. When our church had a May Luncheon I took a big bouquet along. We were to bring something that showed our interests. Some paintings were displayed, some needlework, and some framed photos taken on travels. People sat at the table that indicated the month of their birth. Somehow I ended up at a November table even though I have a May birthday.

Ice Cream Festivals With Minor Leagues

TOWSON, MD — Dairy farmers of the Mid-Atlantic are sponsoring mini-ice cream festivals in Harrisburg and Reading to honor June Is Dairy Month.

THe Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association will be serving everyone's favorite kind of ice cream — FREE ice cream — during dairy night with the Harrisburg Senators and the Reading Phillies.

Beginning with the first pitch of the game Turkey Hill, Hersheys, Friendly's and Haagen Dazs will be dipping and scooping ice cream and frozen yogurt to all the fans.

WGAL-TV of Lancaster will join MAMMA in reaching consumers about the goodness of milk and dairy products through pre-event television publicity and coverage of the event.

Also, WGAL-TV on-air personalitics will challenge the Harrisburg Senators and the Reading Phillies in the popular celebrity cow-milking contests. Pennsylvania's Secretary of Pennsylvania's dairy princesses will be serving cold chocolate milk to fans as they enter the gate. In Harrisburg the chocolate milk is provided by Lenkerbrook Farms and Turkey Hill. Clover Farms and Wengerts are providing the chocolate milk in Reading.

Dairy night in Harrisburg is Friday, June 14, when the Senators meet the Canton Indians. Game time is 7:05 p.m. Dairy Day with the Reading Phillies is Sunday, June 23. Game time is 1:05 p.m. The cow-milking contests will be held just prior to the game.

Frederick Keys and Hagerstown Suns

The Frederick Keys and the Hagerstown Suns, farm teams of the Baltimore Orioles, will feel right at home this year when MAMMA brings the farm to them, the dairy farm that is.

Home Gardener Should Read And Follow Labels

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Take this short quiz. Question: What are homeowners supposed to do about old chemicals in old pesticide containers?

Choose the correct answer: A. Dump the chemicals down the drain. B. Stick the unused chemical in another jar and leave sit until you can get rid of it at another date. C. Bury the containers in the backyard. D. None of the above.

The answer is, certainly, D.

These are some of the questions that home gardeners ask about pesticides and fertilizers. Many questions were addressed at the Lancaster Co. Home Horticulture Seminar (Simple Garden Chemistry) last week at the Farm and Home Center.

Follow procedures

For unused portions of pesticides and their containers, the best thing is to follow the proper procedures for disposal, according to H. Bruce Hellerick, horticulture extension agent.

"Don't throw it down the sewer — it's not good for the environment and you could be in trouble if they catch you doing that," said Hellerick. Use any remaining product according to the label — or, for Lancaster Co. residents, simply phone the Lancaster Solid Waste Disposal Authority and arrange a time to come in to dispose of the container.

Also, mix only the pesticides you are going to use — do not store mixed pesticides for future use.

Hellerick examined the trade names and labels of various home pesticides, including herbicides, fungicides, and other types.

Identify pest

To handle lawn and garde.. pests, homeowners should first identify the pest. Consult with the local extension office or read publications (including "Pest Suggestions For Insects and Diseases," a Penn State publication available for $8 from your extension office). Determine if the pest is either "a good guy or a bad guy," said Hellerick. If the number of infestation is small, perhaps no treatment is necessary.

The next step is to scout and see how many pests are there. "We have to be out there constantly looking at the plants — really get down and look for the insects," he said.

Next, treat according to several options, including sprays, traps, or other techniques, including (in the case of tree infestation) skirts. Home gardeners can also look for egg masses during the winter and simply scrape them off and dispose of them properly.

Afterward, home gardeners should assess the problem. "If it didn't work, then we have to do something else. We have to use all steps necessary — it's a whole cycle, all the way through," he said.

Read label

The best thing for the gardener is to carefully read the pestcide label and watch for application conditions. Many herbicides have residual affects and have restrictions on what type of areas can be applied. Others have the same EPA registered chemicals sold under different brand names — but are esssentially the same product, according to Hellerick.

Gardeners should consider purchasing only those chemicals they need for one season.

Hellerick also described fertilizer applications and what types of fertilizer to look for. Growers should take time to read the type of fertilizer on the package and discern the differences between water soluable and water insoluable nitrogen.

Also, liming is important to the soil and to how nitrogen, micronutrients, and pesticides work on the plants.

Plant applications

Other types of plant applications, including root developers, blossom and fruit sets, wilt preventers, and leaf cleaning chemicals were discussed.

Hellerick cautioned gardeners to beware of claims by some of the product manufacturers as to "miracle type things," he said.

"Go back and find out what the product is, and see if it is nothing more than ordinary elements. In this case, it's the buyer beware.

"We're trying to raise your consciousness," he said. "When you're going to the garden center, we want you to make an informed decision about what products to purchase."

Scholarships Enhance Food Science Programs

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — General Mills will award a $1,500 scholarship to a junior at the Penn State food science department.

Another $1,500 scholarship will be given to an outstanding senior in food science who plans to enroll in a graduate program or to an outstanding candidate for a food science graduate degree.

Recipients for both scholarships will be selected by food science faculty members and representatives of General Mills and are renewable on an annual basis at the discretion of General Mills.

A $15,000 scholarship fund to benefit Penn State students interested in mushroom science technology has been established in the memory of James "Jim" Robers, former owner and president of a Coatesville spawn company.

Penn State alumnus John B. Swayne Jr. has given $250,000 to endow a professorship at Penn State University College of Agriculture in honor of his father, a pioneer in the state's commercial mushroom industry.

The professorship will strengthen research and teaching programs in mushroom science.

Heroine Fulfills Mission By Reaching Out To Others

"When you help others, something comes back to you - just when you need it!" proclaims Ruth Jackson, advocate for youth.

Mary Laeger-Hagemeister
Dauphin Co. Correspondent

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The plaque reads, "Unsung Heroine, 1991, Ruth Jackson, Children and Youth Advocate in Central Pennsylvania. In appreciation of the contributions you have made to improve the quality of our community, and in recognition of your respect for each individual, the International Women's Day Coalition of Harrisburg offers you the Unsung Heroine Award with our deepest gratitude."

Ruth Jackson, home economics teacher at John Harris High School, Harrisburg, has been an advocate for children both on the job and in the community. The honor of unsung heroine, recently bestowed on her is a token of appreciation by her peers through NAACP (National Association for the Advancement of Colored People) peers who nominated Ruth for this prestigious award.

In 1979, Ruth began a program titled "Deb-etts" which is open to girls from ages three to 16 years of age. "The purpose is to prepare young ladies for adulthood." At age 16 they make their debut as young ladies. Between those years, the emphasis is placed on building positive self-esteem and leadership skills. Leadership is built with the older girls helping with the leadership role.

Being concerned with the image of African-Americans' skills lying in athletics only and not scholastics, Ruth joined forces with NAACP to begin a "mind Olympics." ACTLSO (Academic, Culture, Technical, Logical, Science, Olympics) philosophy is to go for the goal with your mind — use brain power. Students compete in brain Olympics at the local level with the winners advancing to Texas for the national competition as part of the Conference on Black Basic Education. Winers receive medals just like athletes do in their Olympic competition.

Newly organized is Ayudamos, which is Spanish for "we help." It is comprised of members from all class levels, providing they have good grades, interests that fit the mission and their behavior is upstanding.

Ruth's desire to help teen parents is also a vital part of her award. She has built a program at John Harris High School to give teen moms life skills, including parenting, decision-making, and resource management. She has enlisted the volunteer help of a young male at Penn State Harrisburg who works with the often forgotten teen fathers. "We need to help all of them understand resources. I want kids to learn the value of earning their own money-real independent living," Ruth said.

She carries that desire beyond the school setting as well. Ruth is a Mentor Mother volunteer with the Penn State Cooperative Extension 4-H/Family Living program in Dauphin County. This program matches volunteer moms in the community with teen mothers as a support and mentoring to aid the teens with their parenting skills. Ruth was matched with a homeless teen this year. "Working with a homeless teen mother is a big challenge, but I know she needs my help," Ruth said.

When asked why she expends so much energy on youth, her eyes light up and a smile spreads across her face. "It's my little mission. I've never experienced failure when I'm working to help young people. The kids keep me young — they energize me!"

Her energies seem endless as she gives to youth on the job and in the community.

Dear Golden Pride/Rawleigh
In July of 1972 I found out that I was a diabetic My doctor put me on medication that I took on and off for the next sixteen years In July of 1988, we heard about some of the results from people who used Golden Pride I started on Formual #1, #3 and #4 and within a few days I could see a difference My sugar started to drop from 200 to 109 At the present time, my doctor has taken me off the medication completely I am thankful to Harold Coffman and Henry Fitz for telling me about Golden Pride
Gladys E Embly

Dear Golden Pride/Rawleigh
One day I had a fever of 103 degrees I was taking two Propolis about every hour and in about 3-4 hours my temperature was down to normal I have also been getting ear infections since I was a baby My ears would really hurt and it always meant we had to go to see the doctor and get medicine Now since my mom gives me Propolis, my ears rarely hurt and if they do mom gives me extra Propolis and my ears stop hurting and we do not have to go to the doctor
Adam Newcomer Age 9

Dear Golden Pride/Rawleigh
What really got us interested in helping others was my mother who got such good results She will be 91 in several weeks She was on a shot of insulin a day After taking Golden Pride s Formula #1 about a year she was put on a tablet a day of insulin Now she isn't taking any She also had high blood pressure being in and out of the hospital many times The Formula #1 also helped that problem and she no longer has a blood pressure problem She also had a problem with seeing very well and by taking Formula #1 her eyesight improved to where she could read a newspaper which she couldn't do for years Since we've been sharing Golden Pride health products with people, we've seen many great results and felt great ourselves

My husband, Dave, and I and our 6-year-old son Cole live on my parents' dairy farm where I work full time. Dave is an accountant, but works on the farm whenever he can. Someday we hope to take over the farm.

Cole has really become a little farmer. He gets off the bus and changes clothes and heads straight to the farm. He has certain chores he does, including brushing his first calf. He will be showing her at the Perry County Fair this year. He is very excited.

I currently am chairperson of the Perry County Dairy Promotion. I enjoy promoting our product and working with the Dairy Princess.

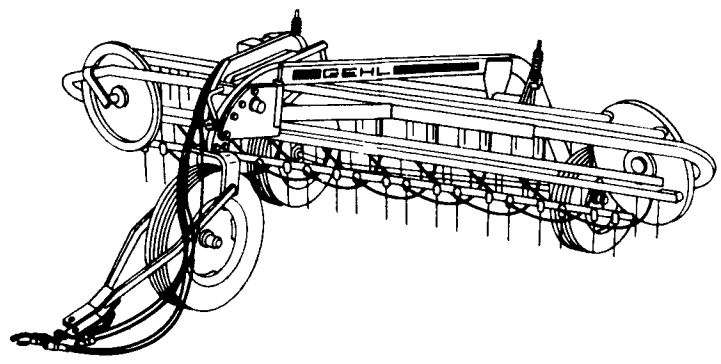
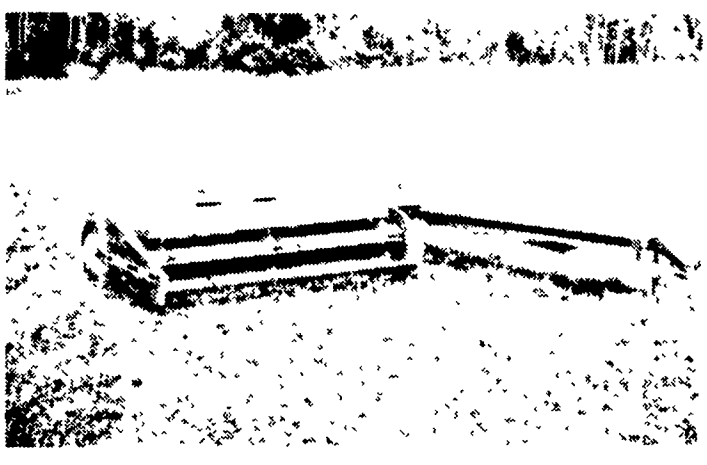
GEHL (R)

Rake Gently and Thoroughly!

Rake your fields clean with a Gehl parallel bar rake Available in 8-1/2 ft and 9-1/2 ft models, with either left or right hand delivery, you have a choice of hydraulic or ground drive By teaming up a left-hand model with a right-hand model, in a V-pattern, you can rake up to 18 feet of hay into a big, fluffy double windrow For added reliability, the tubular steel basket frame and high-strength steel stripper have been welded into a single unit Basket leveling linkage is spring-loaded, allowing the basket to float over uneven terrain to pickup every piece of hay When you want to rake you fields clean, Gehl is your choice





Thoroughly Conditioned

The Gehl 2140/2170 mower conditioners will thoroughly condition your hay These pull-type mower conditioners are built for fast [illegible] and worry-free performance. The wide, intermeshing rubber rolls with intermittent ribs give you 35% more working edges than continuous-ribbed rolls, for more thorough conditioning. That means shorter drying time with less leaf damage. See your Gehl dealer today on how the 2140, with a 7 ft. cutting width, and the 2170 with a 9 ft. 3 in cutting width, will fit into your haymaking operation

Simple Design.....Easy Operation

If you're looking for extra-easy operation, the Gehl Models 1310 and 1710 fixed chamber round balers can't be beat No other balers are as easy to operate The pickup feeds material directly into the baling chamber, so these balers easily handle all crops and conditions Incoming material gently tumbles inside the chamber, gradually forming the bale The operator simply keeps an eye on the pressure gauge, when it reaches the factory recommended psi the bale is complete Stop by your Gehl dealer today for more information on these easy-to-operate balers from Gehl

ALL-IN, ALL-OUT

Fifteen years ago, an all-in, all-out farrowing house was a universally accepted creature in the hog business. The added cost of making separate rooms was more than offset by a reduction in respiratory and diarrhea diseases. Soon to follow was the concept of all-in, all-out nurseries.

Now there is a lot of momentum to handling pigs from birth to market as a single group, which means the grow-finish stage would also be managed in an all-in, all-out fashion.

The advantages may seem pretty obvious, and so may the drawbacks. What isn't so clear is how to estimate a pay-back, especially for the small producer.

Change your facilities to all-in, all-out? It depends on your current level of performance, says a veterinarian. It depends on the costs of remodeling says, an engineer. It depends on how long you're committed to the hog business, says a producer.

Let's take a brief look at the issue, and in the end you'll hopefully be a little better equipped to figure whether your farm is suited for continuous flow or groups.

The Advantages

When you're able to break the disease cycle and reduce the transmission of bacteria and viruses from older pigs to younger pigs, a lot of nice things happen.

E. coli has trouble getting a foothold. Pasteurella can't survive. Even parasites have a hard time hanging on. Emptying a room, followed by washing and disinfecting, will do all of these things. The resultant increase in performance and reduction in death loss is the major incentive for handling hogs as a group.

There are some other, more subtle advantages to all-in, all-out. Facility cleanup, especially in the farrowing house and nursery, is easier since you don't have to worry about chilling other pigs in the room. Buildings are cleaned more often, making for a pleasant work environment. And since the entire farm revolves around a schedule, the chores are more apt to get done on time.

The Drawbacks

Facilities. If increased performance and disease control are the chief incentives for all-in, all-out, then the major obstacle has to be the cost of facilities.

Dividing a room means new walls and doors, tight enough to restrict air flow from one group of pigs to another. It also means separate ventilation systems. Each room will require at least two fans and a new inlet.

Ideally, manure gutters should be separate, although the engineers tell us that as long as pigs don't come in direct contact with manure from another group of pigs, we can get by. Labor. Someone has to clean all those pens. Currently a lot of producers pressure wash and disinfect their finishing facilities only once every few years. Many others never clean them at all.

In an all-in, all-out system, the grower-finisher barn will need to be cleaned at least 3 times a year.

Management. It's no cinch maintaining a group system. If, for example, you're set up to farrow 10 sows every two weeks, you'll hopefully be breeding 12-14 sows one week out of every two.

Breeding too many sows will cause you grief, and not enough sows will cost you money. If you have a sow come in heat in the "off-week" and you decide to breed her anyway, then she'll farrow in a "group" all by herself.

This problem presents a real dilemma for the moderate-sized producer who is trying to batch-farrow his sows. A good number of sows will come into heat when they're not supposed to. Do you sell them, or hope they'll be in "sync" with the next group? Either way, it's going to cost you some money.

Traffic Patterns. Pig traffic and people traffic should be one-way as much as possible. For example, sows leaving the farrowing house should be able to walk (or ride) to the breeding barn without going through any farrowing, nursery or finishing rooms. Growing pig movement should be in a constant direction of youngest to oldest until they reach market weight.

Ideally, people working in the facility should walk from the rooms holding the youngest pigs to those housing the oldest pigs. Foot baths should separate each division. If this traffic routine isn't practical, do the best you can, realizing pigs will spread disease more readily than people.

The Economics

Farrowing. I wasn't able to find any controlled studies comparing group farrowing with a continuous system. But I would speculate that sows in an all-in, all-out farrowing house would produce at least .10 to .25 more pigs per litter than a similar group in a continuous flow facility.

The profit associated with an extra pig per litter is an incredible $35 to $50, since each extra pig goes to market for little more than the cost of feed. If we accept the .25 pig per litter advantage, the returns would be $8.75 to $12.50 per litter.

Nursery. Preliminary data from Michigan State University shows that in a 35-day time period, pigs handled all-in, all-out gain 15 percent faster and 6 percent more efficiently than pigs in a continuous-flow nursery.

Under their conditions, this figure out to four extra pounds of pig for only an extra four pounds of feed. If you sold the pig when he left the nursery, the economic advantage would be at least $2.00, maybe $3.00. But in a farrow-to-finish operation, the heavier pigs leaving the nursery would have to pay their dividends in the grower-finisher phase, which is much harder to calculate.

Finishing. Purdue seems to have the most objective information, with all-in, all-out hogs showing a 10- or 11-day reduction in time to market as well as a reduction in respiratory lesions. Feed efficiency wasn't measured in the Purdue studies. However, Dan McManus, a private veterinarian from Iowa, does have feed data on some 34,000 hogs in his practice.

While not under controlled conditions, his data show a 0.3 pound of feed/pound of gain advantage for hogs raised under group systems compared to those in continuous systems. McManus also sees a 5 percent drop in death loss in the all-in, all-out operations.

Dr. Kirk Clark, D.V.M. from Purdue University, suggests that handling growing-finishing hogs in an all-in, all-out system will save about $4 per hog ($12 per year per finishing pig space). Based on the data from Purdue and McManus' practice, the savings could easily be twice that amount.

A Hypothetical Example for a Small Operation. Let's pretend we have a one-room, 16-crate farrowing house, a one-room 150-pig nursery, and a one-room 450-pig grower-finisher. Everything currently operates on a continuous flow basis, weaning pigs at about 4 weeks.

We're going to consider breaking the facilities into rooms so that we can farrow sows by groups, and raise their offspring in groups as well. We'll split the farrowing house in half, so that we can farrow 8 sows at a time.

Each room will turn over once every five weeks, so we'll be farrowing 8 sows once every 2½ weeks. We'll also split the nursery into two rooms, each of which can house the pigs from 8 sows (roughly 75 pigs). And we'll break the finisher into six sections, each of which will house the hogs from 8 sows (roughly 75 hogs).

By making these changes, we'll assume that the sows will raise 0.25 more pigs per litter. Since we're farrowing eight sows at a time, that comes to 2 pigs per group. To be conservative, we'll assume each extra pig is worth $20, for a total of $40 per group. We'll also assume that the savings in disease control, death losses, and performance in the finished hog will amount to $4 per head.

For 75 pigs that comes to $300 per group. So our total estimated savings per group is $340 (about $4.50/head). The estimated costs of the facility changes are itemized below:

Farrowing House:
New ventilation	$1,500
New wall, alley	$2,500
Nursery:
New ventilation	$1,500
New wall, alley	$2,500
Finishing:
New walls	$7,500
Total	$15,500

(Note the gestation area will still operate in a continuous flow pattern.)

Now to estimate what the cost is per farrowing group, we'll first assume that this $15,500 investment will be depreciated over 5 years. $15,500/5 = $3,100 per year (not including interest).

Since each room will be used about 20 times per year, the cost per group is only $155 ($3,100/20). So we have an added facility cost of roughly $155 per group farrowed. We'll also plan for an extra 20 hours of labor per group for cleaning the facilities. At $7.00 per hour that's $140 per group, for a total cost of $295.

For our example, the $295 spent per group is slightly offset by the $340 saved. So the decision isn't easy. But keep in mind that, while my figures may be realistic, they won't necessarily apply to your situation.

What About Your Conditions?

Some rules of thumb: 1) If the average days from birth to market is more than 180, and you have more than 3 percent death loss from weaning to market, you can probably assume that you'll save at least $4 per head by changing to all-in, all-out. 2) Multiply that $4 figure times your total production per year. That will be your annual savings. If your herd performance is already high and your slaughter checks show few respiratory lesions, the savings will be a lot lower. 3) Determine (with some help from your veterinarian or extension specialist) how to best remodel your facilities. (Use two weeks as the maximum age-spread within a room.) Estimate the cost of renovation, decide how many years you need to depreciate it, and calculate the annual cost. Compare this to the estimated annual savings. 4) Since the amount saved is only an estimate, proceed with remodeling only if annual savings is significantly higher than the annual cost.

Livestock Notes

Oral Larvicide For Fly Control

Oral larvicide (trade name Rabon) has become increasingly more popular in the last few years for controlling flies in and around livestock facilities. Let's look at what oral larvicide can and can't do, when it may be effective, and how to use it.

Oral larvicide contains stirophos which, when fed to animals, passes through the digestive tract and is concentrated in the manure where it prevents development of horn, face, house, and stable fly larvae. Oral larvicide has no effect on adult flies. Also, house and stable flies lay eggs in decaying organic matter other than manure, so oral larvicide may not totally eliminate these species. Other fly control measures may be necessary when these species are a problem.

Isolation from other livestock is essential if oral larvicide is to be effective, especially if neighboring livestock farms don't use oral larvicide and/or store any amount of manure. Flies hatched in a neighbor's manure pile can easily migrate to your facility and impair your fly control program. Sanitation and overall farm cleanliness are also very important if you plan to use oral larvicide. Non-manure breeding sites must be eliminated in order to control house and stable fly populations.

Oral larvicide is most effective when used together with other fly control measures because it tends to break down quickly in decomposing manure. Also, insecticide resistance develops more rapidly when immature insects are treated.

Oral larvicide is fed by mixing a small amount into the animal's ration when the feed is ground or mixed. Inclusion rate per ton of complete feed depends on how much feed the animal consumes each day.

Oral larvicide should be preblended with ground shelled corn or other feedstuff before dumping it in the mixer. Preblending ensures proper distribution throughout the entire feed mix. Oral larvicide is not recommended for pelleted, predominantly pelleted, or liquid rations.

Feeding of oral larvicide should begin in early spring before flies become a problem and continue until cold weather limits fly activity.

Aeration Equipment Available From Aer-Way

ONTARIO, Canada — The full range of patented Aer-Way hay and pasture aeration and renovation equipment and minimum-till cultivators is now available with a bolt-on, replaceable tine.

Paul Gillen, manager of marketing, said that the new tine is the result of two years of design, development and test.

He said, "the new tine is a substantial technical breakthrough The improved metallurgy provides increased tine life and yet maintains the ductility for use in stoney areas." The increased hardness is particularly important for use under highly abrasive conditions.

Aer-Way's new bolt-on design rollers can also be retrofitted to all existing units currently in the field.

For more information, contact your local Aer-Way dealer or call (800) 457-8310.

Weed Control Without Chemicals

BRILLION, Wis.— Brillion's new high clearance Ro-Crop Cultivator provides economical weed control without the worry of chemicals.

Extra long gang frames offer optimum trash clearance to handle minimum tillage residues with ease. A 25-inch underframe clearance means more days to cultivate crops and an extra pass for weed control. Heavy duty straight edge shanks allow high-speed tillage without throwing dirt or residues.

"Our customers can depend on Brillion's strength and durability for long wear and quality performance," said Carl Miller, sales manager. "The heavy duty no-wobble parallel linkage provides extra stability and keeps cultivator shovels in the ground at proper angles to kill hard-to-get weeds. Each assembly weighs more than 50 pounds."

The Brillion Ro-Crop Cultivator is maintenance free and easy to use. "Cultivating depth is easily adjusted by moving a pin to the proper hole," said Miller. "And all bushings have grease zerks for longer bearing life."

Brillion's new BRH Ro-Crop Cultivator is available in six models, from 4 to 16 rows with row spacings of 30-40 inches. Larger BHFF models fold for easy transport and storage. Optional equipment includes cut away discs, open top shields, rolling shields, and down pressure springs.

For more information, contact your local Brillion dealer, or write Brillion Iron Works, Inc., Brillion, WI 54110, (414) 756-2121.

Agway Markets Dairyman's Edge

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Agway has acquired exclusive marketing rights to a new feed additive for dairy animals developed and researched on northeastern dairy farms.

The product, Dairyman's Edge, is a special formulation of all-natural yeast cultures, enzymes, and bacteria that can be added to pelleted feeds, top dressed on feed, or used in total mixed rations.

The product is manufactured by LBJ Pakke Inc. and distributed and marketed by Papillon Agricultural Products, an international marketing organization. Dairyman's Edge has been field tested over the past five years on dozens of dairy farms including Agway members, who were asked to participate in the development program.

Observations most often reported by farmers in the research project were improved appetite, increased milk production after six to nine weeks, and reduction of stress related problems. Most farms used Dairyman's Edge at one once per head per day either as a top dress supplement or in a total mixed ration.

Dr. Normand St-Pierre, dairy and business manager at Agway, points out that Dairyman's Edge is not a substitute for good nutrition, good management, or superior genetics.

"It is a promising feed additive that is based on sound field research and farm experience," St-Pierre said.

The new feed additive is available through most local Agway stores and representatives.

David Fisher of Mapleview Farm, Madrid, N.Y., has been feeding Dairyman's Edge to a herd of 400 milking cows with excellent results.

Sandler Sales Institute Opens

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Good and Stober Enterprises announces the opening of a new sales training facility known as Sandler Sales Institute of Lancaster.

Programs consist of continual lifetime training instead of the normal one, two, or three day sales seminar classes. New selling skills and attitude/behavior techniques are offered to businesses and sales professionals who are not happy with their sales productivity.

The goal of the institute is to take the pain and frustration out of the sales profession and put in place a teachable, workable sales system to increase business profits.

Sandler Systems has approximately 70 franchise locations throughout the country. Their national headquarters is located just outside of Baltimore, Md.

Good and Stober Enterprises will cover the Lancaster, York, Reading, Harrisburg, and surrounding areas. Training programs will generally be held at Good and Stober Enterprises' main office at 600 Old Hickory Road, Lancaster.

For more information, contact Good and Stober Enterprises at (800) 525-7762 or (717) 560-8863.

KEYS TO MAKING AND FEEDING QUALITY HAY FOR BEEF COWS

For most of the productive year, an average-sized beef cow can meet most of her nutritional needs with some good quality hay. This is particularly true if there is a small percentage of legume mixed with grass in the hay.

Most producers are aware of the proper stage of these grasses and legumes for harvesting. The key component is that, if the plant is mature, there is a reduction in feed value.

We often hear about tons of hay produced per acre. If we are selling the hay by the ton, this would be appropriate. If we are feeding beef cows, we should be more concerned about the TDN and protein production per acre, and these factors can be improved by proper harvest.

Mother Nature will often dictate when we will harvest hay in Pennsylvania, but give some thought to harvesting a little early this year to capture more feed value instead of waiting for tonnage.

For example, the energy value of alfalfa hay will be reduced by almost 20 percent when cutting at full bloom instead of at early bloom. Similar differences in energy value also exist for grass hays cut at a later maturity.

Many of the hay-treatment products are effective. Propionic acid treatment of hay at moisture levels of 20-30 percent will effectively eliminate molds and reduce dry matter losses by a half.

Bale wrapping is another alternative for some producers. A farmer recently told me it costs him about $3.50 per bale to wrap them, but he was able to get a cutting in late October that would not have been possible from a conventional harvest since he was able to bale within hours after cutting. In addition to reducing harvesting losses, the bale wrap also provides a storage advantage to maintain the hay quality.

We can make some of the highest quality hay possible, but in conventional big bales stored outside, we can expect to throw away one of every three of the bales from storage losses. A recent summary of several hay storage trials indicated there will be a 29 percent greater feed value in bales stored inside than those stored outside with no cover, and there will be 27 percent more hay in those stored outside with a plastic cover and elevated off the ground.

It does not take much of an economist to determine some kind of cover will be cost-effective for big bales of hay. A big bale of hay is in the form of a cylinder, and, for a bale with a 3-foot diameter, the outside 6 inches of the bale represents about 30 percent of the volume of the bale. The damage from weather does not have to penetrate very far into the bale to represent a large loss in hay.

Elevation off the ground will generally reduce storage losses by about 10 percent. Most water damage to big bales stored outside on the ground is on the underside of the bale, not on the top. Rock, wooden pallets, and small trees can all be used to elevate the bales.

Store the bales at the top of the hill on well drained soil. Feeding losses with hay can be considerable. For example, it has been determined that unrolling big bales in the pasture with no feeder will result in a loss of 50 percent of the bale. While this practice is often used for soil conservation, it is a very wasteful way to feed hay.

A small ring-type feeder is a wise investment for feeding hay. Losses will be about 30 percent greater in feeding big bales without using some type of feeder. In years of short hay supply, this becomes an essential practice.

The beef producer can effective- of beef cows if there is high-quality hay available. Proper harvest timing, some unconventional harvesting methods, and proper storage and proper feeding of the hay can help increase quality and reduce losses.

Fly Control

I have encountered numerous questions recently about fly control in beef cows.

To summarize, the most effective control may still be the insecticide-impregnated ear tags. There is some indication horn flies have built up some resistance to the pyrethrin class of chemicals, so you may wish to change to another chemical class such as diazinon or primiphos-methyl tags.

If you have not used tags or a pyrethrin spray on your farm, there is a good chance you can still do a good job with this product. To determine which class of chemical is in any given tag, simply look at the label on the box. Follow the instructions for their use very closely.

I was in Missouri some years ago when the tags were first being tested, and the original studies showed there was no real advantage to tagging the calf as long as the cows were correctly tagged. However, use your own judgement based on conditions at your farm on how many tags to use in each cow and whether to put tags in the calves.

Some of the tags can last up to 5 months, so you can determine the economics for yourself of spraying cows weekly or tagging them.

Oral larvicides can be used for fly control. By this method, the insecticide is added to the mineral or protein available to the cows. The compound is such that it is not digested by the cow, but remains in the manure and kills the fly larvae when the eggs are deposited in it. It is only effective against the larvae, so if there is another source of flies, such as other cows across the fence from yours, the flies will not be controlled.

Radio, Behavior Training Keeps Dog In Line

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.)—Dog Watch, Inc. announces that G & G Industries is an authorized dealer of their Dog Watch™ Hidden Fence System.

The Dog Watch ™ Hidden Fence System is a dog containment system that uses a combination of radio technology and behavior training to keep dogs in a yard or out of a garden.

A thin wire is buried around a specific area and emits an AM radio signal. The dog wears a receiver collar that picks up the radio signal and activates an audible warning and a mild electrical stimulation.

POULTRY HOUSING CONSIDERATIONS FOR HOT WEATHER

Dennis E. Buffington
Professor and Head
Agricultural and Biological Engineering Department

A recent article in this column on "Poultry Environmental Housing Systems" (April 13, 1991) emphasized the importance of proper engineering design, construction, operation, and maintenance on environmental housing systems for poultry to achieve the optimum results.

The hot weather that is already here imposes additional considerations for providing bird comfort to achieve desired results. The management of the environment within a poultry house can markedly influence the efficiency of poultry production. When the efficiency is improved, then the potential for making a profit is also improved.

Optimum in-house temperature for poultry layers is 75 to 80 degrees F, assuming the diets are adjusted based on the daily intake of the birds to achieve high performance. As air temperatures increase above the 75 to 80 degrees F range, special measures need to be taken to ensure bird comfort. The major challenge is to remove the solar heat gain in the building as well as the body heat generated by the birds.

Air movement through the house and around the birds is essential. Even when poultry houses are ventilated with the recommended summer ventilation rate, some problems occur because of lack of proper fresh air distribution within the buildings.

For example, it has been observed that the feed intake and production responses of birds near the exhaust fans of some houses were significantly below the intake and production levels of the birds near the air inlets of the same houses. These observations are indicative of the lack of uniform distribution of fresh air.

Proper air ventilation and air distribution can only go so far to increase bird comfort during hot weather conditions. Then, evaporative cooling is needed to provide additional relief from the summer conditions. Evaporative cooling is beneficial because the evaporation of moisture into the air results in the lowering of the air temperature. The comfort levels of the birds are increased dramatically when effective evaporative cooling systems are used, even though the humidity increases.

The simplest form of evaporative cooling is a misting system. It is very important with misting systems to properly locate the misters or nozzles to provide the most benefit to the birds. In general, the smaller the water droplet size generated, the more evaporation will take place. If droplet sizes are too big, then there tends to be wetting problems within the buildings.

Misting systems require considerable maintenance, especially because of plugging of the nozzles. Filtration of the water into the misting system is essential, but there is still likely to be some problem with nozzles plugging. With a reasonably efficient misting system, temperature reductions of 4 to 8 degrees F can be achieved in a poultry house for several hours during a very hot day.

A more efficient system of evaporative cooling is the pad-and-fan system, involving the use of evaporative cooling pads at the air inlets of the buildings. Typically, the cooling pads are on one end wall of a building with the exhaust fans on the opposite end wall. The birds nearest the evaporative cooling pad will achieve the highest production levels as compared to the birds near the end of the building with the exhaust fans.

Pad-and-fan cooling systems are considerably more expensive to purchase and maintain compared to misting systems. Although higher levels of evaporative cooling efficiency are achieved, the pad-and-fan system probably cannot be justified economically in Pennsylvania, except for special applications.

Poultry producers need to be aware of the environmental conditions to which their birds are exposed and take proper measures to modify the microenvironments surrounding the birds to ensure bird comfort. Keeping our layers and broilers comfortable during the summer is very important to maintain the high levels of egg production and daily gain that are necessary to generate a profit.

In Dry Weather, Raise Sorghum

YORK (York Co.) — Dry soil conditions pose significantly added risk in profitable forage production.

Reduced seed germination and plant growth usually combine to lower dry matter forage yields. Crops differ in their ability to produce under dry conditions.

However, careful crop selection in annual plantings can reduce the risk when planting with moisture-conserving soil preparation techniques.

Forage sorghum and soybeans may be better suited to handle dry conditions. Growing the two crops in combination enables the grower to take advantage of reduced tillage, zero herbicide use, and rapid ground covering capacity which shades the soil.

Seedway, Inc. has worked with a forage sorghum-soybean mixture using Northeast adapted varieties which have demonstrated excellent yield potential in dry conditions as well as normal conditions.

Double SS (sorghum and soybeans) has consistently produced very good yields of high quality forage in on-farm evaluations. Protein production per acre has been especially good based on forage tests conducted to date.

A free Double SS factsheet and forage quality report are available by calling the company at (800) 836-3720.

NUEP Trade Show Reaches For Wide Audience

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Northeast Poultry and Egg Trade Show and Conference, September 25-26, in Lancaster, Pa. will see many firsts this year.

It will be the first time the broiler, egg, and turkey industries are coming together in the Northeast; the first time the show will be held in Lancaster; and the first time Northeast United Egg Producers (NUEP) and the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation combined their respectful annual events.

The formula seems to be working, since booth sales for the Lancaster Sheraton Resort have already exceeded the three previous shows held in Atlantic City.

"Our committee believes this year's event will be of substantial benefit to both exhibitors and attendees," said Mac McLaurin, NUEP president. "This combination of expertise will assure our success and the location makes the show and conference more accessable to producers, processors, integrators, and growers."

Things will kick off Tuesday, September 24 with a golf outing and reception. The fully packed format for Wednesday and Thursday will be presentations on industry specifics in the mornings and a trade show in the afternoons. Keynote speakers will be Douglas Kiker and Earl Butz. The grand finale will be a banquet and entertainment Thursday night.

For more information, contact Mac McLaurin (202) 296-8248 or John Hoffman (717) 652-7530.

American Hereford Association Creates Marketing Department

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The American Hereford Association, recognizing the need to maintain and increase market share in the livestock industry, is reorganizing its departments primarily responsible for marketing and communications.

It has established the department of marketing and development to help address this issue and the overall image of the Hereford breed. To ensure its effectiveness, a complete reorganization of the communications efforts for the "American Hereford Journal" and American Hereford Association is being addressed.

The new department replaces the former Department of Information at the breed's headquarters in Kansas City, Mo.

The reorganization will enable the American Hereford Association to more effectively analyze industry direction and respond in a timely manner through advertising, public relations, and communications. It will encourage the participation and development of young staff members in non-traditional ways to foster professional growth within the organization.

Debbie Norton of Topeka, Kan., has been selected to lead this effort as director of marketing and development. A native of Grandfield, Okla., she previously served as advertising manager of the "American Hereford Journal."

Norton coordinated all advertising for the monthly magazine and semiannual commercial newspaper, "The Commercial Hereford." She was instrumental in the development of the 1990-1991 American Hereford Association advertising campaign which carried headlines such as "A New Feed Test" and "The Big Change."

Debbie Norton

Norton brings years of experience in the purebred industry and advertising to her post. For 12 years, she was the sole proprietor of Norton Advertising Co., a full service agency specializing in livestock advertising, including a livestock catalog publishing component.

PLY-FOIL is a very efficient form of insulation. In application after application it has proven to be extremely effective at controlling heat gain/loss, thus significantly reducing heating and cooling costs. PLY-FOIL Insulation uses an aluminum foil to reflect up to 97% of the radiant heat.

PLY-FOIL BENEFITS

PLY-FOIL products are clean, lightweight, and non-toxic; are unaffected by changes in humidity; do not shrink; and once installed require no maintenance. They do not promote the growth of fungi or bacteria, and provide no nesting support for rodent or insect pests. PLY-FOIL, which has a Class A/Class 1 fire rating, meets the fire and smoke safety requirements of most federal, state and local building codes.

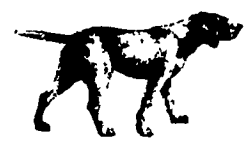
Some dogs will stop at nothing.



If you ever thought about giving your dog the run of the yard, but couldn't see putting up a big fence to do it, a DogWatch™ Hidden Fence System could be what you're looking for.

DogWatch™ keeps an "eye" on your dog by transmitting a harmless radio signal through a hidden boundary wire. A special receiver collar then warns the dog when it gets too close.

Find out more about DogWatch™ Hidden Fence Systems by calling us today.

Great View Farm Offers Fam... S...

Mike Miller forks out some silage to his young herd of Holsteins.

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

FISHING CREEK (Dauphin Co.) — From its mouth at the Susquehanna River all the way along Rt. 443, the long narrow valley that is Fishing Creek Valley is populated by mostly non-agricultural people.

The ancient Harrisburg Country Club is right at the mouth of the valley. There are resort-like small businesses. Commuter homes. Gentleman farms. A development here and there. More coming.

Among all this, a young couple with three children is attempting to continue in dairying on the family farm.

And even with the milk prices as poor as they are, the couple said they are doing fine — but if it wouldn't be for family, they might not be.

Mike and Linda Miller, of Fishing Creek, in Dauphin County, are operating a small herd of grade and registered Holsteins at Great View Farm.

Their children are Heidi, 8, entering her first year in 4-H with a Mark daughter calf (Mike is a Lower Dauphin 4-H leader); Holly, 7, is up for Dauphin County Little Miss Dairy Princess; and then there is Harrison, 6.

The naming of the youngest child is significant to the history of Great View Farm. In 1957, Harrison Miller and his son Paul Miller went into partnership to form Great View Farm. Harrison died in a farm accident 28 years ago. His great grandson Harrison is now the fourth generation Miller to live on the farm.

The farm itself boasted a herd with strong genetic lines, with average production, until a herd dispersal late in 1989, when most of the registered herd was bought by a Wisconsin operation. The dispersal signified the disolving of a father and two-son operation.

Mike and his brother Jeff were the sons in the partnership. Paul Miller, a classifier for the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, is the father.

The 16 animals which were remaining, all young promising heifers, were purchased by Mike and his father Paul Miller.

Paul continues to classify animals and Jeff works for United Parcel Service (UPS), but both are still on the farm on a weekly basis, helping out, concentrating on the crops.

Mike and Linda, both in their late 20s, were married in 1981. They rent the house and barn from Paul and are working on paying off the cattle they bought to start building up a herd. They now have 35 head milking, which they want to level off at 45 head.

The couple said that while they don't have the liquid cash they had while in partnership, "Now we're building equity."

Mike said the heifers he and his father purchased from their own dispersal were some top genetic animals. The way they decided who would own which animal is similar to the way professional ball club owners pick newly eligible players — they held a draft pick.

"We split them up, taking turns picking them. He took a pick, then I took a pick," Mike said.

"We broke up the father-son operation in October 1989," Mike said. They had 55 milking head and sold all stock including those which would freshen in the spring of 1990.

In March 1990 he bought 13 cows. One year later, the herd is up to 35 head milking. By sometime this summer, it should be up to 40. "We're shooting for a herd of 45," he said.

Mike, president of the Dauphin County Holstein Association, also bought some other young stock, including 10 grade animals.

"They are the best investment I ever made. Four or five of them are already making from 18,000 to 20,000 pounds of milk as 2-year-olds.

"I bought four (registered) cows from Vincent Wagn... (of Ju-Vindale Farm, Myerstown, also president of t... Lebanon County Holstein Association) and they've do... really well. Three of the four are making 22,000 pounds...

milk."

It takes a year of production in order to get a first rolling herd average. The first rolling herd average of the "new" Great View Farm herd was 19,393 pounds of milk, 673 pounds of fat and 619 pounds of protein. That's from a herd that consists of three 3-year-olds and the rest 2-year-olds.

That's a considerably higher average than the 17,000 pounds the previous, dispersed herd had managed.

"We're shipping almost as much with 35 cows as we did with 45 cows," Linda said.

Currently he has five cows producing more than 100 pounds a day and three producing about 112 pounds a day.

Mike credits much of the production gain to a change in the cows' diet and consumption rate, along with management.

He credits a lot of the increase to the advice of Tim Kissling, a consulting nutritionist. And while Mike doesn't have the equipment to make a total mixed ration, the diet is monitored and balanced, whereas previously it wasn't.

Also, this year, the feed is apparently in great condition. And it looks good for the coming year. A winter cover crop of rye was cut and baled, but only after laying out in the field for a week because of continually damp and overcast weather.

Remarkably, the rye tested out to 19 percent protein — another reinforcement for cutting when the crop is in peak condition, not necessarily when the weather is optimum.

The protein content of the rye could have been knocked down if the weather had been different, but with the overcast skies and very light rain, followed by a dry cold front to ready the hay, the protein was preserved.

Also, Mike has been keeping the cows in the cool barn with good ventilation by fans. He pastures them at night.

"Something I think is important is cow comfort," he said. He makes sure the cows have adequate feed and water. They have one well that is shared between the house and the barn. A large holding tank for the water is in the basement of the house.

Mike said that the cows also seem to enjoy eating better since he had the manger tiled last year. Prior to that he had a cement manger.

For bedding, the cows have a wood shaving-straw mix in the 50 tie stalls.

For manure storage, a cement block pit was constructed about six months ago. It is designed to hold about a month's worth of manure.

Altogether, on the 253-acre farm, about 40 acres are in corn, 40 alfalfa and 20 in pasture. There is a lot of woodland and sometimes a problem with deer damage, but Mike said the family likes to hunt and enjoys harvesting the deer.

Twenty five animals in the young herd were also recently classified. And although none of the cows were judged Excellents, the breakdown was good enough for a BAA of 103.8.

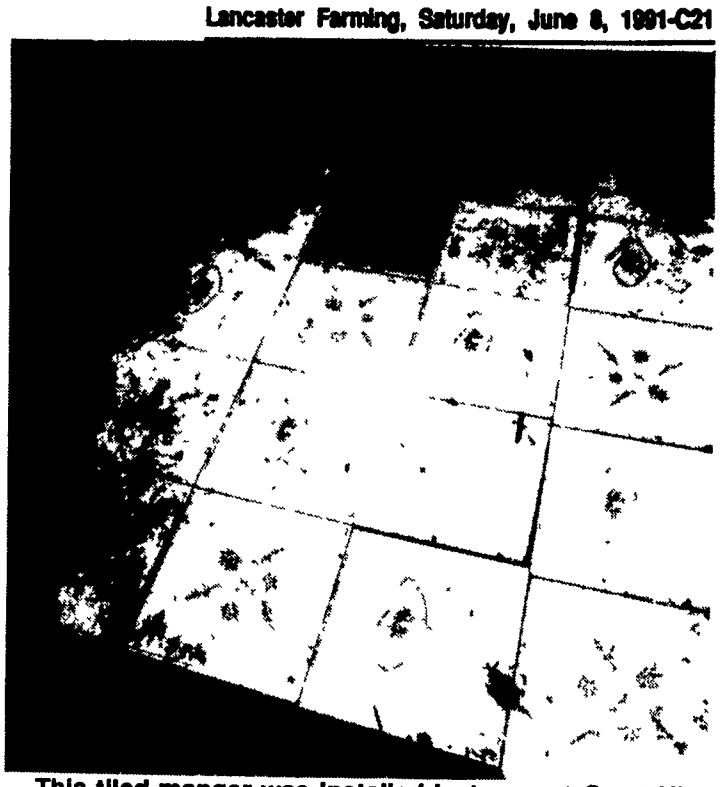
The classifier was not his father, although as a joke, Mike did send a request for Paul Miller as the classifier.

The herd broke down to seven Very Goods, nine Good Plus, seven Goods, and two Fair.

Mike said he feels the strength of his herd is in the feet and legs and udders. Now he is selecting bulls strong in transmitting ability for size and protein.

Mike and Linda do the milkings, with some help occasionally. Jeff helps out after work and Paul pitches in too . . . especially with invaluable breeding advice.

There's also a young neighbor boy who has shown a strong desire to help with the milking. Mike and Linda said he's good enough to milk by himself, although he's only in seventh grade. They gave the boy his first registered animal and he is going to show in 4-H.



This tiled manger was installed last year at Great View Farm and has apparently helped increase forage consumption. The attractive patterns may not do much for the cows, but it does make the barn more attractive for the Millers.

The Millers said they are lucky to have the neighbor boy helping. Finding local help is difficult anywhere, but especially in the Fishing Creek Valley.

It's not just that the Millers don't really have next door neighbors all around them, in the whole Fishing Creek Valley, no one else has a dairy farm. The Millers are the sole survivors of the dairy industry in the valley.

In fact, after the dispersal, with no cows to milk, there was a half a year when there really was no dairy operation at all in the valley. Mike had taken a job in construction.

"I learned some things. I learned how to run a backhoe. But it wasn't what I'd want to do for the rest of my life," Mike said.

"I still had heifers to feed. And I thought, 'How's this going to work, working off the farm and still working on the farm?' We had a baby sitter."

"You could see a change in the kids," Linda said.

"I like working at home. I never really thought I liked it as much as I do, until I worked off. It was a good experience," Mike said.

And to keep from becoming disenchanted with dairying and the farm, the couple and their children get away once in a while. Recently Mike, Linda and the kids went to a park for a few hours to play.

They said it makes a world of difference.

The Millers have nonfarming friends in the community also. Linda said that sometimes they don't understand when Mike or Linda can't drop everything to do something social, but still the Millers aren't socially isolated.

But they said they are torn between the advantages of the family farm and the desire to own a farm in Lebanon County. The Millers have close relatives farming in southern Lancaster County and that would also be a nice place to have a dairy.

However, while some southern Lancaster and Chester County farmers were complaining of no rain late May, the Great View Farm was receiving daily light rain, perfect for the young corn. The Millers said the weather on the farm always seem milder and more dependable than at other locations.

With the farm near the top of the plateau of the mountain area, they don't get the violence of the storms lower in the valley, but their land doesn't get ignored either.

Mike and Linda's herd has a strong start and with the help of Paul the genetics should continue to improve.

With 11 years with the Holstein Association, and being on the road a lot and seeing a great deal of different animals, Paul gets a chance to see the daughters of some of the bulls being tested. According to Mike, "He gets hot on one once in a while."

Of course now some of the names are very familiar . . . Leadman, Cleitus, Vanguard, Tess . . . and Paul may not have used them while they were necessarily in a sire sampling program, but it is an edge.

With the interest in breeding good animals, it may seem contradictory for Mike to buy grades, but he said his goal is not to keep a grade herd forever. Eventually he wants to build an all-registered herd of strong genetics, but only selling milk will enable that eventuality to occur.

Mike said that he doesn't plan on raising a lot of replacements just yet, since the herd is so young, but eventually he'll have to start raising some. And he said he intends to be picky about what he keeps — it won't be grade.

"Our goal is not to get too big, but to get better," Mike said. He said he seeks a balance between the forage production of the land and the ability to feed the herd without having to buy much else, or hire many others.

But these are all future aspirations and in the meantime, there is the low milk price.

Linda works away from the farm on a flexible schedule for a local physician who is an internal specialist.

"We're taking it one day at a time."

This 24' Ruffneck from M. H. Eby is an investment in quality

Your cows deserve the best

A new aluminum trailer, like this one from E.M. Eby, Inc., looks bright and clean when it comes from the factory. The surprising thing is it stays bright and clean for years — with very little maintenance.

Aluminum offers another big advantage over conventional wood and steel trailer construction. It's lighter — as much as 35% lighter.

Eby trailers are designed strong and built tough. Each trailer is custom made to your specifications.

Proof of durability for Eby trailers is their resale value. At five years old, many sell for as much as 90% of their original price.

Please call or write for more information and the name of the dealer nearest you.

Grazing Management Seminar Set

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — Farmers who feed beef cattle, dairy cattle and sheep are becoming more interested in grazing management. When profits are low, optimal use of all resources becomes especially important. By managing pastures carefully, producers can improve feed quality while reducing feed costs. They can extend the grazing season and thereby reduce the need for stored forages. Finally, by increasing the number of animal units grazed per acre, they increase income per acre. All of these factors help to improve net farm income.

A grazing management seminar is scheduled from 8:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., Saturday, July 13th, starting at the Ludwig's Comer Fire Hall, on Route 100 between Routes 23 and 401 in Chester County. The aftemoon portion of the program will be at Pleasant Hill Farm, Glenmoore. Presentations by Penn State and USDA pasture specialists will focus on the following topics:

- Designing a grazing system.
- Stockpiling tall fescue.
- Soil fertility management.
- Grazing warm season grasses and brassicas.
- Pasture water sources.
- Fencing requirements.
- Forage management economics.

The registration fee is $10 per person, due by Friday, June 28. Phone your county extension office to request program and registration information.

Injectable Iron Shortage

Swine producers have recently encountered difficulty obtaining injectable iron dextrans used to prevent baby pig anemia.

Robert Mikesell, graduate research assistant at Penn State, said the cause of the shortage seems to be a supply problem, not an increase in demand.

According to sources at American Livestock Supply, there are only two manufacturers of the injectable iron dextrans sold in the United States. At least one of these manufacturers is currently expanding its facilities and, during the expansion, has been forced to temporarily shut down production.

In the meantime, iron dextrans stockpiles have dwindled and supplies have been tight. The good news is that injectable iron should be available soon after the plant reopens in May.

Until then, swine producers have two options for preventing baby pig anemia. First, there doesn't seem to be a shortage of oral iron in pump bottles. Second, a few handfuls of clean soil or sod (not from a hog lot) offered in a clean pan twice a week will provide enough iron to keep pigs from becoming anemic.

Producers who have a limited supply of injectable iron can inject 50 mg (1/2 cc of the 100 mg product). This dose is less ideal than 100 mg, but is preferred over the use of sod.

Steer Feeding Systems

John Comerford, Penn State beef cattle specialist, relays recent research in Colorado which investigated the economics of self-feeding steers in a feedlot compared to once-per-day feeding in a fenceline bunk.

Yearling steers on a high concentrate diet (90 percent corn) were used to compare feed intake, average daily gain, intake-to-gain ratio, and feed cost per unit of gain.

The results indicated there was no difference in feed-to-gain ratio or feed cost per unit of gain between the two systems. The self-fed steers also showed greater average daily gains and higher feed intake than those fed once a day.

The conclusion from the study was that self-fed, high-corn diets were more economical because there was less labor and fuel costs associated with feeding and there was no reduction in performance or increase in the cost of weight gain.

Lead In Drinking Water?

Lead received a great deal of publicity as a drinking water contaminant when elevated levels were discovered in some drinking water sources in the United States.

Lead is not known to have any beneficial effect on people. In fact, excessive levels of lead in the blood contribute to a variety of health problems, including mental retardation, interference with kidney and neurological functions, and hearing loss in children.

Children are more sensitive to lead toxicity because their central nervous systems are not fully developed. The level of lead allowed in water is based on human health studies.

Although lead occurs naturally in some water supplies, its presence can also be attributed to plumbing. Lead used to be a common plumbing material. Soft, acidic water passing through lead pipe or contacting a lead-soldered joint for a period of hours can dissolve enough lead to cause concern. Homeowners should use lead-free solder when making repairs.

The amount of lead dissolved in water from lead pipes or lead-based solder is highest when the water has been held in the pipe for several hours. Therefore, it is best not to drink the first water from the tap each morning. Run the tap for three to five minutes before drinking it or using it for cooking. Also, since hot water running through pipes dissolves the lead into the water, do not use it for cooking or preparing infant formula.

The recommended treatment methods for removing high or persistent lead levels in water are distillation or reverse osmosis. Although filtration devices that claim to remove lead are available, none is registered by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Remember — boiling water will concentrate lead, not remove it.

Your county cooperative extension office, health department, or water treatment salesperson can provide you with more information about treatment methods.

BARN PAINTING
Aim For The Best - In Coating Film Thickness

To do it right use the finest kind of bristle brush evening out the coating into a film thickness that does not peel in normal moisture stress (found on most barn siding from outside and inside by livestock or stored animal feed)

1. PREPARATION. Peeling old coatings (improperly brushed) needs to be removed The best method is simply water blasting or power washing! High volume of water - medium pressure is best! Done professionally or do it yourself, especially on the easy to reach areas This is resurfacing!!!
2. BEST NEW START ON RESURFACED WOOD SIDING After spraying on this kind of barn paint or stain, take time to pay attention to brush out in all directions to create a film thickness that will prevent future peeling & resurfacing costs & effort This film will let excess moisture breathe through it Depending on the amount of weather wear it can be recoated lightly in 10-15 years Southern exposures usually wear faster

Pa. To Sponsor Rural Statewide Conference

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Gov. Robert P. Casey announced today the commonwealth this summer will sponsor four statewide conferences to bring together rural leaders, community officials, citizens and state government to coordinate strategies and build support for a comprehensive rural development policy.

"The goal of these meetings is to establish partnerships between state government and rural community leaders," said Dr. Helen Wise, deputy chief-of-staff to Gov. Casey. "To improve the quality of life in rural Pennsylvania, we need to coordinate our efforts and design a unified strategy for the future."

The conferences, to be funded by a grant from the Appalachian Regional Commission, will focus on four key issues: rural growth and development, health care, education, and economic development. They will also address recommendations made by Gov. Casey's Rural Policy Development Team, a public-private partnership he established to provide a formal link between rural community leaders and state government.

Each session will run from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and include a keynote speaker, a message from Gov. Casey, a question-and- answer period, and small group discussions. All sessions are free and open to the public.

Rural growth and development will be the focus of the first conference on Friday, July 12 in Monroe County. Karen Miller, state secretary of community affairs, will be the keynote speaker. For more information, contact Ned Dempsey, regional director, department of community affairs, at (717) 963-4571.

Strengthening rural health care in the 1990s will be the subject of a second conference in Warren County on Friday, July 19. Alvin B. Grant, director of the Office of Rural Health, Illinois Department of Health, will give the keynote address. For more information, contact Warren County Commissioner Pat Evans, a member of Gov. Casey's Rural Policy Team, (814) 723-7550.

A third conference, focusing on rural education, will be held at Mansfield University on Friday, August 2. State Secretary of Education Donald Carroll will be the keynote speaker. For more information, contact Prof. J. Dennis Murray, research coordinator for the Rural Service Institute at Mansfield University and a member of Gov. Casey's Rural Policy Team, at (717) 662-4974.

Revitalizing Pennsylvania's rural economy will be the focus of the final conference on Friday, August 9 in Fayette County. Leading the session will be Dr. Stephen M. Smith, associate professor, department of agricultural economics and rural sociology, Penn State University, and Dr. Bernard Hoffnar, president, Pennsylvania Association of Resource Conservation and Development Councils.

For more information, contact Fred Lebder, chairman of the Fayette County Commissioners and a member of Gov. Casey's Economic Development Partnership Board, at (412) 430-1201.

To further encourage partnerships with state government, members of Gov. Casey's cabinet next month will participate in a rural affairs conference sponsored by the Susquehanna Economic Development Association — Council of Governments (SEDA-COG). From June 23-25, SEDA-COG will sponsor "Shaping the Future in Central Pennsylvania," a three-day conference at Bucknell University designed to develop a regional perspective on critical issues such as economic development, environment, education and societal change.

Offers Cost-Cutting Advice

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Some thought-provoking cards dealing with minimizing a herd's profit potential were put on the table before some 250 commercial and purebred cattle producers recently at the Net Profit Conference, a joint production of the American Polled Hereford Association and the Barzona Breeders Association of America.

Producers attending the two-day event in Maryville, Mo., learned that being a low-cost producer in the cattle business is more than not spending money. "It is being a strategist," said Dr. Jim Gosey of the University of Nebraska, one of five featured speakers who presented cost-cutting information to producers gathered at Maryville's MFA Farmers Livestock Market the first day.

Other nationally known speakers offering cost-cutting advice on forage utilization, livestock handling and facilities, herd profit potential practices, and breeding and reproductive efficiency included Jim Gerrish of the University of Missouri; Dr. Temple Grandin and Dr. Jim Brinks, Colorado State University; and Gregg Simonds, manager of Deseret Land & Cattle, one of Utah's largest ranching enterprises.

Simonds explained how forward thinking and forage management practices have helped Deseret reduce per-cow costs from $234 in 1979 to $197 10 years later, all while increasing production.

The Net Profit Conference also featured two panel discussions, one which was led by five progressive producers from four states. Explaining numerous cost-saving measures that have worked for his 1,000-head commercial operation, Barry Dunn, Mission, S.D., said, "We try to match genetics that we buy with our resource base. Longevity in the cow herd is the missing link to profitability."

The industry's market setters, a sale barn operator, an auctioneer, and an order buyer were the feature of the second panel. With an opportunity to evaluate the producer's product on an ongoing basis, Del Clement, MFA's auctioneer, explained that the three work as a team to merchandise the producers' cattle to the best of their ability. He said, "It's easier to please cattlemen who have good cattle to sell."

Frank and Lynn Felton of Felton Ranch hosted the second day of conference activities. Focusing on herd management for optimizing productivity, several industry officials demonstrated the importance of cow production records and ultrasound for performance and pelvic measurements in heifers and bulls. Tours of Polled Hereford and Barzona cow and sire groups and the two breed crosses rounded out this conference.

Deere Introduces Side Delivery Spreaders

MOLINE, Ill. — John Deere has introduced three new side-delivery spreaders for customers who handle mainly slurry manure.

The model 872, 874, and 876 all have large capacity, leakproof tanks for productive material handling, and design features that enhance material flow, provide long component life, and promote safe, convenient operation.

With standard 6-inch side extensions, the 872 has a rated capacity of 1,000 gallons, the 874 1,400 gallons, and the 876 2,000 gallons. Optional 11-inch side extensions increase capacity to 1,230, 1,700, and 2,400 gallons, respectively. The company recommends teaming the 872 with at least a 65-hp tractor, the intermediate model with an 80-hp or larger tractor, and the 876 with at least a 100-hp tractor.

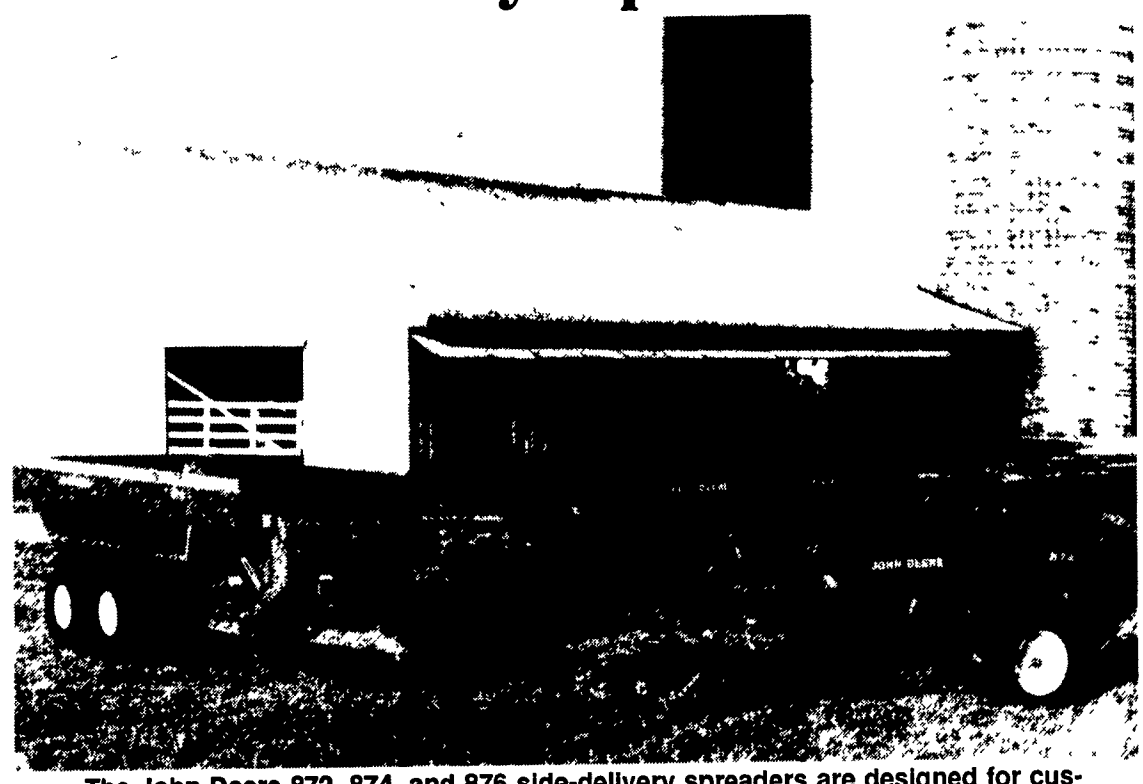
Material Flow

Each spreader features a 24-1/2-inch diameter auger mounted near the bottom of the V-shape tank. Special intermittent flighting on the auger delivers a smooth, steady flow of material to the front expeller.

When handling semisolid manure, the operator can raise the auger hydraulically to break up bridged material that can form above the auger during unloading. Single-acting cylinders raise the auger against spring force. This design ensures constant down pressure for positive material engagement when the control values are in float. It also permits the auger to float over objects that might otherwise cause damage to the system.

The expeller's slanted and staggered paddle segments engage the material at different intervals with a slicing action that makes efficient use of power and produces a consistent spread pattern up to 50 feet long. The paddle segments are bolted on for easy serviceability should replacement be needed.

An optional deflector can be installed on the expeller gate to aid the breakup of small clumps of sticky material for a more even spread pattern. An expeller pan is available to help keep liquids from running under the expeller to the ground during unloading. Other attachments include an expeller corner lid to help retain backspray in the tank as it empties and tank splash guards to minimize fore-aft spillage.



The John Deere 872, 874, and 876 side-delivery spreaders are designed for customers who handle mainly slurry manure. The auger, mounted near the floor of the V-shape tank, can be raised hydraulically when handling semisolid manure to break up bridged material that can form above the auger during unloading. The auger has intermittent flighting that delivers a smooth, steady flow of material to the front expeller.

An optional polyethylene tank liner can be installed to reduce the buildup of frozen material and improve the flow of material to the auger.

Long Component life

A heavy, double-reduction chain drive provides long-term durability and low maintenance for the auger drive. The auger is shear-bolt protected against torque overloads for long, reliable service life. The double V-belt expeller drive reduces torque peaks in the driveline and provides quiet, efficient power transfer.

The tank carries a 10-year warranty against rust-through for the original owner.

Safe, convenient operation

The driveshaft between the PTO pedestal and the auger and expeller drive systems is fully enclosed for operator protection. Shields protect the operator from accidental contact with the auger and drive systems, yet permit easy accessibility for adjustments and maintenance. A ladder is provided to help make tank inspections and maintenance safe and easy.

A warning light kit is available for those applications that require on-road transporting. A safety tow chain is standard.

The hydraulically controlled expeller gate enables the operator to control spread rate from the tractor seat. An indicator on the spreader shows how far the gate is open. Another indicator shows the operating height of the auger.

A cleanout door in the tank bottom at the rear of the spreader provides an easy way to drain the tank completely to prevent the buildup of frozen material on the tank floor.

More information is available from John Deere agricultural equipment dealers and from Deere & Company, John Deere Road, Moline, IL 61265.

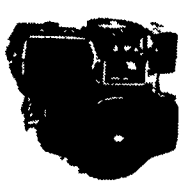
LOMBARDINI Kawasaki



This twin 20 hp is becoming very popular for hay balers and other applications traditionally equipped with 2 cylinder Wisc. engines and can also replace the older 4 cylinder engines on some applications.

This engine has been in use on hay balers for over 10 years and is doing a very good job. We can also mount Wisc. clutches or reductions on it for some applications. Fuel efficiency is very good.

Buy now while we still have this heavy duty engine. New model coming next year.

CONSIDER THE MANY ADVANTAGES OF POURED CONCRETE

TO ALL DAIRYMEN AND LIVESTOCK PRODUCERS WHO NEED A SILO FOR THIS YEAR'S FALL CORN CROP...

WE WANT TO HELP!!!!!!

Contact us soon to discuss "special discounts" for early orders on silos for fall. During the "lull" between our busy spring season for wilted hay storage and the even busier fall season - we are anxious to help during this period when milk prices and cattle prices are down.

"NOW IS THE TIME TO MAKE YOUR BEST DEAL ON A POURED CONCRETE SILO FOR 1991."

Don't wait too long because a good hay crop (mostly in the silo or barn) and good rains signal a busy fall silo-building season.

Since 1908, SOLLENBERGER SILOS CORP. has been providing the Silo Structures now in demand by more and more farmers concerned about "silage quality." "Nothing keeps feed better than our poured concrete silos."

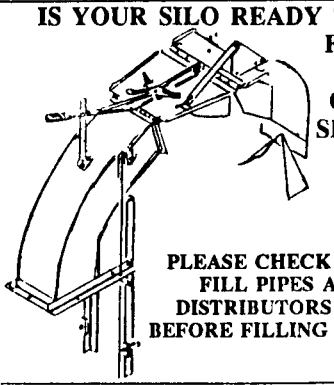
IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH GRASS SILAGE?



PLEASE CHECK YOUR FILL PIPES AND DISTRIBUTORS NOW BEFORE FILLING SEASON

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

PURINA MILLS, INC.

Dairy Tips By Dr. Randy Lyle, Ph.D.

Purina Mills Dairy Consultant

DO SILAGE ADDITIVES MAKE YOUR SILAGE BETTER?

The answer is NO!!! The fact that you use a silage additive on your forage does not make the forage test any better than when it goes in the silo.

The purpose of using a silage additive is to help speed up the fermentation process and to help keep heat from causing to much damage to the forage. There are many types of additives that can be used to complete this job including enzymes and inoculants (bacteria).

Enzymes help break down the carbohydrates in the feed to make it available to the natural bacteria on the plant. The natural bacteria can then use the carbohydrates to complete their job quicker. By using a product which contains inoculant (bacteria) you are simply adding more "bugs" to get the job done quicker.

If you are considering a silage additive to use on your forage compare Purina. Purina has 3 products to choose from: Purina Maxi-Sil

1. Purina Silage Additive - a blend of organic acid and enzymes
2. Purina Dry Silage Inoculant - a complete bacterial inoculant
3. Purina Water Dispersable Silage Inoculant - a complete bacterial inoculant to be mixed with water

IMPORTANT CONSIDERATIONS:

- is there enough additive applied to each lb. of forage to have an effect?
- is the product university tested or researched?
- is the additive mixed well with the forage?
- is the product cost effective?
- does the product have a high enough level of enzyme or bacteria?

If you have these questions about your current product or are considering trying something new call your local Purina Dealer today! You can see the results of Purina Maxi-Sil when the forage test sample comes back!
